

ADMIRAL DEWEY LIKENS TOGO'S POSITION TO HIS SITUATION AT MANILA.

Hero of the First of May, 1898, Admits He Arises at 5 A. M. to Read His Newspaper.

INTENSELY INTERESTED IN EASTERN NAVAL GAME

Believes Togo is Harbored in Stronghold at the Northern End of Formosa Island, Waiting to See Which Route the Russians Will Take.

Cleveland, O., April 22.—The News-Enterprise association yesterday made public the following copyrighted and exclusive article on the Russian-Japanese war by Admiral Dewey.

Discussing the naval situation in the east the famous American sea-fighter says:

"One of the most momentous naval battles that has been fought for years is impending in the far east, and like all the rest of the world, I am watching with the greatest interest.

"The situation is one of almost thrilling interest. I confess that I am up in the morning at five o'clock for the papers. All naval men are interested, but I have, possibly, an added interest, owing to the fact that I was myself at one time confronted by a dilemma not unlike that which is now faced by the Japanese, Admiral Togo.

"As to what will happen, it is anybody's guess. There are as many opinions as there are naval experts. My guess, perhaps, is no better than another's except as I may have a little more familiarity with the complicated circumstances which must be taken into consideration. But one thing on which all authorities seem to agree is that the Russian fleet is numerically and in tonnage and armament stronger than the forces of the Japanese. They have several more heavy fighting ships, according to reports, than the Japanese and it is also to be remembered that there is a secondary fleet of three or more heavy ships which is on the way and will be due on the scene in about forty days. Now the great questions are: Can Admiral Togo afford to meet the Russian forces and risk all on the east of a great naval battle in the open sea? Can he afford to risk the loss of his battleships? Suppose Admiral Rodzestvensky wins? What will be the effect on Japan then? How about communications between Japan and Manchuria? How about reinforcements to the land forces and ammunition and supplies? Unless the Japanese can protect their transports and the commerce about their own island and in the vicinity of Port Arthur, of what avail will their land operations and their past victories be to them? Their fleet is confronted by a fleet outnumbering theirs. Now the question is, what will Admiral Togo do?

"Some naval authorities incline to the belief that Admiral Togo will avoid a direct engagement and will try to pick out the weak members of the Russian fleet, cutting them off in the night, using his torpedo boat destroyers and following much the same tactics as were employed at Port Arthur.

"I wondered at that time that the Japanese did not go right into the harbor and finish the work at once, but I have been informed since by a reliable authority that the Japanese admiral had strict orders from the Mikado not to risk the loss of his battleships. The loss might, at that juncture, have been fatal. So they took the slower methods to the same end. It is not impossible that the same policy will be pursued now.

"I presume Admiral Togo's fleet is in a port at the northern end of the island of Formosa. There is a magnificent and strongly fortified harbor there, a veritable Gibraltar. No doubt Admiral Togo is in constant touch with the Russian fleet, through his scouts and his wireless telegraph equipment and is watching to see whether Admiral Rodzestvensky will take the inner or outer channel.

"There is a possibility that the three battleships which the Russians have at Vladivostok will try to effect a junction or will begin to prey on Japanese commerce and on general contraband of war in foreign ships. These are some of the possibilities which the situation involves.

"Now suppose the Russians should succeed in forcing a decisive battle; suppose, for the sake of argument, that they should lose. The lost battle would not be so disastrous to them as a losing battle would be to the Japanese. It would not have the same effect of cutting off communications between their land forces and their base of supply and it would not, to the same degree, expose their shipping and their coast to the ravages of a hostile fleet. And they would still have the secondary force coming along in May.

"When I was at Manila, I was confronted by a similar problem for a short time. Not long after the battle of Manila, information reached me from a friend in Paris of plans which Spain was making to fit out a fleet to raise the siege. I was apprised of the names and number of the battleships which would be sent and as my fleet had not then been reinforced by heavy fighting ships, the Spanish force would have been stronger than mine.

"There would not be time for the Monardock and Monterey to reach me, though they had started. I was set to thinking what I should do with this superior force. What happened was that, on my suggestion, a fleet was fitted out under Admiral Watson, which was to threaten the coast of Spain. This led to the abandonment of the purpose to send the fleet to Manila. But there was a time when I had to face a problem something like the one which confronts Admiral Togo. I had my plan. I should not have waited in Manila. I had a dispatch boat faster than anything in the Spanish fleet and should have been in early touch with the Spanish fleet, and should, I hope, have met them where they did not expect me. But every situation must be judged by itself. The Russian-Japanese problem is intensely interesting.

WILLING TO TESTIFY FOR NAN PATTERSON

Eissenberg Tells the Story of Caesar Young's Death in Detail.

Chicago, April 22.—Samuel Eissenberg, the Russian Jewish coatmaker who has told of seeing a man kill himself while in a cab with a woman June 24, 1904, on West Broadway, New York, expressed a willingness today to go to New York and testify on the witness stand in the case of Nan Patterson.

"The cab in which Young and Nan Patterson sat passed within five feet of me," said Eissenberg today. "The man was apparently drunk, and he appeared to be fighting with the woman. She was clinging tightly to his hands. The cab was moving very slowly, and the woman said something to the driver, as if to tell him to go faster. He cracked his whip, and the horses went faster. Suddenly the man got his hands free and pulled a revolver from his pocket. His hand went up and down, and then the shot rang out. The man fell forward, the revolver fell from his hand, and he fell over on the woman's lap. The woman seemed to faint, because her head fell on his shoulder."

An area of high pressure continues to move southeastward over the Missouri and middle Mississippi valleys. It has caused a sharp fall of temperatures in the lake region and the Ohio valley.

Teamsters' Unions Will Demand That All Employes Cease Hauling for Montgomery Ward and Co.

Chicago, April 22.—Business agents from 47 teamsters' unions in Chicago have been instructed to demand that employers cease hauling goods for Montgomery Ward & Co., whose teamsters and garment workers are on a strike. A refusal will in each case result, it was stated, in the calling of a strike by the joint council of teamsters.

NEARLY TEN THOUSAND

Great Throng of Steerage Passengers Arrived at New York Yesterday—Record for Single Day Broken.

New York, April 22.—Four transatlantic steamers which arrived at this port yesterday brought 9,675 steerage passengers, the largest number ever passed in quarantine in one day.

It was impossible to handle the great throng in one day at least 4,000 would-be citizens had to remain over night on board the ships on which they arrived, as 6,000 is the limit of Ellis Island's clearing capacity.

Until last night 62,791 immigrants had been landed this month, compared with 42,447 for the same date in April last year. The figures indicate that in May always the banner month of the year, the Ellis Island record is likely to be outdone.

SCHINDLER RESIGNS

Leaves the Service of Detroit Southern On May 1.

T. C. M. Schindler, general freight agent of the Detroit Southern railroad, has tendered his resignation, to take effect on May 1. His resignation is due to the reorganization of the property. Before going to the Detroit Southern, Mr. Schindler was the general freight and passenger agent of the Cincinnati Northern, with headquarters in Toledo.

GARFIELD LEAVES

Starts From Topeka for California to Investigate Further.

Topeka, Kas., April 22.—James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, left for California tonight. Mr. Garfield will not return to Kansas to take further part in the standard oil investigation which he has been conducting for two weeks. He will leave the work in charge of several agents of the department of commerce and labor.

Mr. Garfield held conferences this afternoon with Governor Hoch and Judge Pollock of the United States District Court.

Champion Wrestler's Great Strength

John J. Zimmer, Amateur Champion Middleweight Wrestler, Says His Wonderful Strength is Due to Regular Use of That Marvelous Tonic and Invigorator, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

He Writes: "All the medals I have won in athletics and honors I have gained on the wrestling mat owe to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey."

JOHN J. ZIMMER.

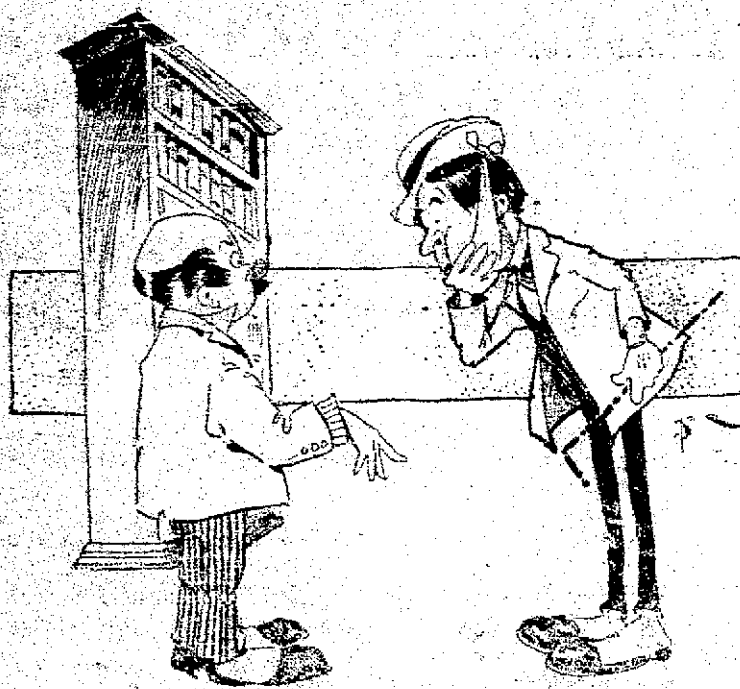

Gentlemen: All the medals that I have won in athletics and the honors that I have gained on the track and on the wrestling mat owe to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I began to take your medicine four years ago, when I was a mere stripling and very much run down in health and weak in body. I had been bedridden for four months, and the doctors thought I would not recover, when an athletic instructor, a neighbor of mine, took me in charge. He stopped all medicine and gave me Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and with the aid of massage brought me back to normal health. Since that time I have trained regularly in the gymnasium and have known no medicine except Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. — JOHN J. ZIMMER, Amateur Champion Wrestler.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Is the greatest strength builder and tonic stimulant known to medicine. It attacks the seat of the disease, drives it out and rebuilds the weakened tissues in a gradual, healthy, natural manner.

"Duffy's" is the only cure and preventive of consumption, pneumonia, grip, bronchitis, coughs, colds, malaria, low fevers and all wasting, weakening, diseased conditions. It makes the young strong and healthy. In use by years. Write for free copy of medical booklet, Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

CAUTION—Get the genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, sold by all druggists and grocers throughout the world in sealed bottles only—price $1.00. See that the "Old Chemist" trade-mark is on the label, and that there is a star over the cork. Beware of substitutes and cheap imitations. "Duffy's" Pure Malt Whiskey, offered by unreliable dealers.

Prospective Patient—Do you give gas here?
 Dentist—No, you have to buy it. You can get it next door for nothing; that's a barber shop.

The Britt-White Fight.

Jimmy Britt and Jabez White, the English lightweight champion, met recently in Frisco and signed articles countering arrangements for the international match for the championship of the world.

According to the articles, the men have agreed to fight twenty rounds before Jim Corbett's Athletic club, where all of the big championship matches have been decided.

The weight agreed upon was 123 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the battle. The fighters lost little time in coming to terms. White was represented by Charley Mitchell, while Jimmy Britt and his brother Willie did the talking for the other side.

White has engaged training quarters at Mike Sheehan's Boulevard camp and is hard at work. Mitchell is looking after White in training and hopes to have him in excellent shape for his fight with the American.

Hackenschmidt's Career.

George Hackenschmidt, the European wrestling champion who is to meet Tom Jenkins, has a record of wonderful achievements that spreads from England across the continent, overlaps the ocean and trails across the Antipodes. He has cracked the ribs of the mightiest of the strange hold specialists of England, France, Turkey, Japan and Australia and has never known defeat. But Jenkins isn't the least bit afraid of the terrible Russian and is chafing with impatience for the bout with Hackenschmidt.

The Mysterious Spit Ball.

Pitcher Jack Chesbro of the New York Americans has created a great sensation with his spit ball, and scores of twirlers are endeavoring to solve its mysteries.

Chesbro describes the method of throwing the ball as follows:

"The principles of the spit ball, by the way, may be well illustrated by the old trick of throwing a child's hoop with a reverse twist, so that after it has run along the floor with a certain amount of speed it suddenly stops and rolls back again. The spit ball is pitched so that after it has gone a certain distance at great speed the reverse 'English' so to speak, makes it 'break' or drop away so quickly that it is almost impossible for a batsman to hit it squarely.

"Stoval of the Cleveland once purposely hit a foot under where the ball seemed to be about to pass over the plate and knocked it against the center field for a homer.

"But that was luck, don't you know. The spit ball is thrown after wetting the fore and middle fingers with saliva, so that they do not retard the sphere. A twist is applied by the thumb. This wetting the fingers before pitching is going to revolutionize box work. I'll venture to predict that more curves, drops and shoots will be invented in the next five years than anybody has an idea of. I have been experimenting a great deal myself and have already discovered several deliveries that if mastered will put the original spit ball in the shade. But I'll not try any of them until I get control. At Harvard several young men tried to catch the spit ball, with its variations. One had a thumb broken, while another had an egg shaped lump raised on his shin bone that made him limp for a week."

Coe a Rival of Rose.

Wesley W. Coe, the newly discovered shot putting marvel of Boston, is determined to relegate far to the rear the records established by Ralph Rose.

Coe has already beaten Rose's best previous shot record in an unofficial test, and it is believed in many localities that he will defeat Rose officially before the year is over.

Efforts Looking to the Erection

OF A HOME FOR WORKING
GIRLS AND MOTHERS IN THIS CITY.

ARE BEING MADE AND THE LA-DIES SHOULD MEET WITH A HEARTY RESPONSE.

The following circulars have been sent broadcast and should meet with a liberal response.

It is the first effort to locate in our midst a home for working girls and mothers, something Lima is sorely in need of. Don't turn it down, reach down in your pocket and give something, if nothing more than a 25 cent piece, for every little helps, you know.

The circular:
Owing to the fact that our progressive city is destitute of a place where in our girls and mothers may find rest and recreation, many of the good people of our town feel burdened to give the matter their immediate attention.

Lima is well abreast in her social, religious and educational institutions but in this respect she is sadly lacking.

Our men and boys are well provided for; why should we not look to the welfare of those upon whom, so directly, the happiness of the home depends?

We are sure the establishment of such a work must appeal to every right-minded citizen of the community.

Your yearly subscription to this worthy cause will be gratefully received, and entitle you to a voice in the direction of its affairs.

Hoping a personal solicitation will be unnecessary, and that this letter will receive a prompt response, we will thank you in advance for any amount from fifty cents to fifty dollars.

From the residence on north Metcalf street occurred the funeral of Miss Edna, the 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wemmer, whose sad death was chronicled in these columns a few days ago. It will be remembered that the child was taken down with diphtheria and had almost recovered when complications set in with the above results.

The services were largely attended and many beautiful floral offerings were in evidence. The services were conducted by Rev. Paul Lind, pastor of the German Reformed church, and the remains were consigned to a resting place in Woodlawn cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Milton Weiselbaum, William Deisel, Carl Reitz and Charles Walten. Music was furnished by the German Reformed church choir.

Among those from out of the city who attended the funeral were Messrs. D. Ritter, of Chicago; John Eckerly, of Cincinnati; J. W. Klyer, of Dayton, and R. M. Britton, of Toledo.

FRIDAY.

SMART STREET SUIT FOR THE JUVENILE.

All of the rose and geranium shades are in the very first flight of fashion, and this smartly simple design is in a geranium red mohair of the soft and silky chiffon finish. The little coat shows rather more than a suggestion of a military finish, with its gold buttons, braided epaulettes and general air of smart severity. The velvet collar, empiece, vest and cuff are in a deep rose red shade, according well with the fancy braid. The coat sets snugly in the back, and there is just a hint of a blouse in the disposal of the front, where the belt is of the geranium red mohair. The skirt is arranged in pleated panels, setting closely over the hips, and showing the fashionable flare below the knee, where an interlining of princess haircloth is placed to insure the correct swing and smartness of the design. The pleats are of the box order, and rows of fancy stitching appear on each, these ending in a fan shape just above the stitched hem.

EXPLAINED.

One Little Club.

Mrs. Frank Grant entertained the members of the Heria Mona club on Tuesday afternoon at her home on north Pine street. Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. Railing were the only guests.
The rooms were daintily decorated in Easter flowers and here a most animated contest at pedro took place.
Mrs. Cramer captured the prize, a china spoon tray fell to Mrs. Bennett. The Heira Mona is a new club and the members are Mrs. Frank Grant, Mrs. Cramer, Mrs. Beelman,
Mrs. Ollinger, Mrs. Yant, Mrs.
Shockey, Mrs. Sweeney, Mrs. Stumbaugh, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Guncheon,
Mrs. Hadsell and Mrs. Byers.

Priscilla.

The Priscilla circle, also a new addition to clubdom is composed of Mrs. Belford, Mrs. Priest, Mrs.
Feist, Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Pugh, Mrs.
Railing, Mrs. Bennett and Mrs.
Grant. Mrs. Bennett was at home to the club this week when a few very pleasant hours passed away socially.

At the Country Club.

Mrs. J. B. Vail and Miss Vail entertained the Bridge Whist and Young Ladies' Whist clubs on Wednesday. The Country club was the scene of this beautiful function and a happier time could not have been found anywhere. Tulips were everywhere about the rooms and at the conclusion, those who were highest received a pot of blooming tulips.
Luncheon was served at tables preti-ly laid. Out of town guests were Mrs. Frank Griffin, for whom the affair was given, Mrs. Elgood Lufkin, of Buffalo, and Mrs. Ralph Warner, of California. Mrs. Vicary, Mrs.
Clement Baxter, Mrs. O. B. Bell, Miss Belle Folsom and Miss Helen Leete were additional guests.

Celebration of Anniversary.

A number of Lima people have received invitations to attend the celebration on next Tuesday of the 30th anniversary of Rev. Francis M.
Quatman, as pastor of the Holy Angels church, at Sidney. Solemn services will be held in the church at 9
a. m. at which Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati, will preach the sermon.
The committee in charge is composed of Rev. B. F. Beckemeyer, assistant pastor, and Messrs. I. H. Thedick, Milton M. Wagner, William M. Kingseel, Martin Quinlisk and James Ovender.

A most successful surprise was tendered Mrs. Clarence Almur at her home 1015 West Wayne street, Wednesday evening by her friends of the Hardanger club and their husbands.

Entertained.

Mrs. W. F. Dobbin entertained the Hardanger club Thursday afternoon.
The guests were Mrs. Dickman and Mrs. Moses. The club worked diligently until four o'clock when a most delightful lunch was served by the hostess.

Rear-Admiral Hichborn
Praises Pe-ru-na.

ADMIRAL'S WORDS CARRY WEIGHT.

REAR-ADMIRAL HICHBORN is one of the best known admirals of our navy.
His statement concerning Peruna will have much weight as it goes out into the world.
What he says is echoed by many other naval officers of high standing.

WHAT THE ADMIRAL SAYS.

Philip Hichborn, Rear-Admiral United States Navy, writes from Washington, D. C., as follows:

"After the use of Peruna for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic."—Philip Hichborn.

AN EVERPRESENT FOE.

The soldier and the sailor are especially subject to catarrh in some form or phase.
Exposed as they are to constant changes, subject as they are to various vicissitudes, and all kinds of climate, wet and dry, night and day, they find catarrh to be their most insidious and everpresent foe.
In the barracks and on the field, Peruna is equally efficacious.
Taken in time, it will absolutely prevent catching cold.

PE-RU-NA AN ABSOLUTE SPECIFIC.

After a cold has become established, Peruna will break it up quicker than any other remedy known to man.
Even after a cold has become settled in some organ of the body Peruna can be relied upon to promptly dispel it.
Peruna will cure catarrh, whether acute or chronic, but a few doses taken in the first stages of the disease will be more effective than when the disease has become chronic.
If you suffer from catarrh in any form, do not neglect it. Take Peruna at once. Delays in such matters are dangerous.

Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Herman Beckman, 333 West Wayne street.

Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Chamberlin, of Reece Ave., were surprised on Friday evening by their friends who remembered the twenty-first anniversary of their wedding. Progressive pedro resulted in pretty prizes for Miss Emma Verbyrke, Mr. S. Woods, Mrs.
Woods and Mr. M. Chamberlin. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. S. S.
Woods, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Deikman,
Mr. and Mrs. Henry Risser, Mr. Albert Grant, Miss Emma Verbyrke,
Mr. George Amstutz, Mrs. Ella Miller,
Miss Treva Reed, Mr. Floyd Chamberlin, Mr. Melvin Chambers and Miss Doeia Verbyrke.

The Shower Club.

A new club something quite out of the ordinary has been recently organized on the plan of several already in existence in Chicago. This is known as the Shower Club. Each member contributes a quarter to the treasury at each meeting, the hostess in turn purchases some useful gift, several perhaps, for the amount allowed her, and at the meeting of the ladies after the program of the afternoon, numbers are drawn and the one holding the lucky number, receives, in turn, the shower of pretty articles. At the meeting this week with Mrs. Jennie Loder, Miss Iva Bowers secured the beautiful cut glasses.
The members are Mrs. Van Horn,
Mrs. Maxwell, Mrs. Landis, Mrs.
Warfield, Mrs. Rudy, Mrs. Bokers,
Miss Iva Bowers, Mrs. Tolby, Miss
Minnie Tolby, Miss McMonigal, Mrs.
Sings and Mrs. Loder.

RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA.

"I am convinced of Peruna's curative qualities and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from catarrh."—Commodore Somerville Nicholson.

FROM HIS OWN EXPERIENCE.

"The use of your Peruna as a remedy and cure for catarrh by many of my friends who have been benefited by the same, as well as my own experience as to its efficacy and good tonic properties, causes me to recommend it to all persons."— Ex-Lieut. U. S. Navy, James M. Morgan.

PE-RU-NA CURES THROAT CATARRH.

"I can cheerfully recommend your remedy, Peruna, to my friends and other sufferers as one of the best remedies I have ever tried for catarrhal troubles of the throat and kindred diseases. I also consider Peruna a grand tonic."—Admiral James A. Green.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.

"I have used your Peruna with satisfaction and can cheerfully recommend the remedy as an effective remedy for coughs and colds."—Rear-Admiral J. A. Howell.

USED PE-RU-NA IN HIS FAMILY.

"I have used Peruna in my family, with the most flattering results.
"I can recommend your valuable remedy as a most efficient remedy for coughs, colds and catarrh."—Col. U. S. Marine Corps, C. J. Porter.

No remedy ever yet devised has received such unstinted eulogy from so many renowned statesmen and military men as Peruna.

We have on file thousands of testimonials like those given above. We can give our readers only a glimpse of the vast array of endorsements Dr. Hartman is receiving.

MOULTON BREAKS
WITH DR. HALLCOMMANDER IN QUARREL WITH HIS LIEUTENANT CAUSE
A NEW AUXILIARY.

The following is taken from last evening's Toledo Blade:

Lima, O., April 21.—A lively dispute is on in Grand Army of the Republic circles, brought about by factional differences led on the one side by the department commander, of Ohio, Col. I. B. M. Moulton, and on the other by his former lieutenant, Dr.
George A. Hall, who conducted the cavans which resulted in Moulton's election a year ago. An effort has been made to keep the dispute quiet.

but it has reached such a large stage that the two former friends are now in open warfare. It grew out of the installation here a week ago of the "Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic," of which new order Mrs.
Hall was elected president. This move of Hall's was taken by the post proper as an attempt to disrupt the present strong Woman's Relief Corps auxiliary, as many of the members of the new order were drafted from its roster. As a result the Moulton forces refused on vote to sanction the meeting of the new Lady G. A. R.'s in the post club rooms, and the rupture has gradually widened until it threatens to disrupt the two women's auxiliaries.

The Merchants' Association of Lima comprising nearly all business men on both sides of the river will have a banquet in the near future, which promises to be one of the most enjoyable and interesting gatherings of the kind ever held here. Besides an elaborate supper there will be music and toasts by our best local talent.
The affair is to be a celebration of the first anniversary of the association's existence and they intend to have these banquets every year. A committee is now at work completing arrangements.

THE MAY FESTIVAL.

According to the usual custom The Choral society this year presents a festival of unusual merit combining with the Philharmonic Orchestra. The work chosen is the beautiful work of Haydn, THE SEASONS, one of the most pleasing oratorios.

All who have heard "Creation" will be more than pleased that a companion work by the great composer has been chosen.

Soloists have been, secured from New York and Chicago and the work will be given in magnificent style and will be held on May third.

Easter Sunday At The Churches.

will be a quiet Sunday at the C. A. Rev. A. O. Pecker will be his first of his three addresses. Sunday has an appointment out on alternate Sundays, so his date the Y. M. C. A. will be April and May 14th, when he will speak on the "Educated men of the world." No speaker has been secured for Easter Sunday, since there are no services in all churches. The study club, however, will meet at 8:00 p. m. at the time, but the time will be 8:00 p. m. instead of 4:00. Those who were the class last Sunday were enthusiastic in their desire to continue course.

any people of this city may not know that the Y. M. C. A. has been conducting bible classes in six of the nine shops of the city since last October. These classes have all been continued this week because with return of warm weather so many of the shop men go home for their winter, who in cold weather remained in the shop. Yet the attendance at the classes to the very last was well up. With a total attendance of 4598 it will be seen that the need has been widely shown and the fruit should result. Further continuation of this branch of the Y. M. C. A. work the past year will be made the annual report.

In spite of the early warm weather the disturbed condition of affairs from the quarantine and other causes the membership of the Y. M. C. A. is holding remarkably well. It is to show that the young men of the city appreciate the value of the association to them and are availing themselves of its privileges. But it requires the hearty co-operation of members to bring the Association advantages to every young man who profits thereby, so if you are enjoying your membership, pass the word to the next man.

ATHLETIC PARK ASSURED.
The Athletic Park for use of the Y. M. C. A. Outing Club, and it is up to the Association members to organize a club to make use of grounds.

On the Bulletin Board in the Association is a card which all members holding a club of this kind are asked to sign. On Thursday, May 4th, at 8 p. m. a meeting is to be held to organize and to which all members interested in any kind of athletic sport, such as base ball, tennis, swimming, running, jumping, pole-vauling, or hammer throwing, etc., are invited to attend as are also any members who like good things to eat, ice cream, cake, strawberries and cream, watermelons, etc.

The plan of organization will be explained at this meeting. Refreshments will also be served. Keep this in mind.

JUNIOR GYMNASIUM EXHIBITION

Next Wednesday night at 7:45, the two Junior Gymnasium classes will combine and give an exhibition in the gymnasium.

It is expected there will be at least sixty boys taking part.

About two hundred and fifty witnessed the one given by the same classes last year and only favorable comments were heard in regard to it. The entertainment this time will be no wise inferior to that of last year. Two short games of basket ball will be played—E. Juniors vs. Royals—A. Juniors vs. Intermediates.

RECEPTION

TENDERED A PARTY OF DETROIT SCHOOL TEACHERS BY LIMA CITIZENS THIS AFTERNOON.

They Arrived From a Trip South and East on a Special Train and Were Entertained at the Lima and Norval Hotels for Dinner.

At noon today a special train bearing a party of Detroit school teachers arrived in the city over the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad and were taken in charge by a party of Lima citizens and entertained at the Hotel Norval and Lima House for dinner. After dinner Manager Bendure gave the visitors a trolley ride about the city.

The visitors who have enjoyed the past week at Old Point Comfort, Norfolk and Washington, left later in the afternoon on a special train for their home.

Several Limaites were with the party during the trip, among them Passenger Agent Frank Burkhardt, of the C. H. & D., and wife, and Mrs. Lomison and Mrs. Thompson, of south Main street.

Suit for Divorce Filed at Clerks Office.

ROSCOE BLACK, FORMERLY EMPLOYED IN THE L. E. & W. YARDS; THE DEFENDANT.

Mary E. Black has entered her complaint for divorce against Roscoe Black. She says she was married in Lima, December 29, 1902, and has one child fifteen months old. She also charges him with being for two years guilty of drunkenness, gross neglect of duty, idleness, and he has not provided for her the common necessities of life, and therefore asks the court to give her an absolute divorce.

Deeds Recorded.

Elizabeth Lawrence and others to Wm. May, 8 acres in August's township.

Moses Stager and wife to Leonard L. Stager one acre of land, $80.

Maggie D. Hicks to W. R. Jones, lot 197 in Clifton, $2200.

Five mortgages were filed.

ASSAULTED

HIS AGED FATHER AND THE POLICE ARE MAKING AN INVESTIGATION.

The report reached this city this afternoon that one Adam Wesel had been assaulted in a frightful way by his son, at his home a few miles north of this city along the Detroit Southern railroad. The report said that the aged gentleman had been knocked down and that his teeth had been knocked loose. Chief of Police Mills and Officer Kelly drove out this afternoon to make an investigation and found that there was no truth whatever in the report.

WITH FRAUDULENT ISSUING OF A CHECK—MACK WATTS FORMERLY OF THIS CITY IN TROUBLE.

Mack Watts, formerly of this city, having been actively engaged here and in the Indiana field in the oil business, was arrested at the home of his father in Mercer township and taken to Battle Creek, Michigan, to answer to a charge of fraudulent issuing of a check.

It seems that Watt has not been enjoying the best of health and recently went to a Battle Creek sanitarium to take treatment. When ready to depart he gave a check for one hundred dollars in part payment for his bill, receiving the balance in cash. The check was presented and payment refused. Hence the arrest.

CREATORE

And His Great Band of Musicians

WILL AGAIN VISIT THIS CITY, APPEARING AT THE FAUBOT OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 12.

Creator and his magnificent band, assisted by Madame Barville, soprano, who it will be remembered gave such a superb concert here last September, are booked for a return engagement at the Faubot opera house, Friday evening, May 12. The press of this city was unanimous in pronouncing this organization the finest that ever visited Lima, and made the prediction that the house would be crowded if the band ever returned. This city is certainly to be congratulated on securing the only concert to be given in this vicinity and as selections from "Parsifal" will be included in the program this will add greatly to the interest in the concert. The NEWS desires to publicly endorse this band to its readers as the finest in the world, and hopes that Lima will show her appreciation by giving it the patronage it deserves—a packed house from bottom to top.

The band is brought here under a positive guarantee by Mr. B. A. Conolly and notwithstanding the enormous cost of the band popular prices will prevail, making it possible for all to hear it.

How Billy and Ellen Made Easter a Holy Day

BY HELENA DAVIS.

"Mercy me!" cried Ellen to her brother Billy on Easter morning as the two came down stairs to breakfast. "Mercy me! Just see the parson hall and dining room! How beautiful they look! Flowers—flowers very where, and the lilies—aren't they exquisite?"

"Yes, and isn't it a pity we should have such loads of them while some poor souls haven't any?" said thoughtful Billy, who always felt such sympathy for those less fortunate than himself. "We could do with half as many and let some other, not able to buy them, enjoy the other half. Maybe I'm a funny kid—but I never like to have the flowers of anything."

Ellen set to thinking, her brother's words taking root in her quick susceptible mind.

When breakfast was over and the two children were dressing for Sunday school Ellen said to her mother: "Mamma, have we any flowers to spare?"

Mamma looked inquiringly at her

Billy looked up, and, boy-like, he whistled to attract the sick child's attention.

little laughter, asking: "Why, dearie, do you wish to give someone an Easter bouquet?"

"Well, brother says it's a pity we have so many flowers while others have none—on this day of all days, too, when they should have them," she answered. "I don't know anyone in particular who hasn't them, but—I suppose if we looked we would find a great many."

Mamma kissed Ellen tenderly. "You may go and look for some poor souls and give away all the flowers you wish to. And Billy may go with you."

"But," hesitated Ellen, "we won't know where to look, besides, won't it keep us away from Sunday school?"

"No, you'll have time before Sunday school. It is now just 8 o'clock. That gives you an hour and a half," said mamma.

Billy was called and told that he was to go with his sister on an errand which his own thoughtfulness had suggested.

"Where shall we go?" he asked, eager to start.

"You will be led aright—I am sure," replied their mamma. "You do not need directions."

Hurriedly Ellen and Billy donned their hats while mamma filled two baskets with the freshest of cut flowers that so lavishly filled the rooms. In a few minutes they set out, carrying the flowers. For several blocks they hurried down the beautiful avenue in which they lived, then turned into a side street leading into the tenement quarter of the town. Neither child took the lead, for some unseen force seemed to guide their footsteps.

Scarcely two blocks had they gone when Ellen looked up toward an open window in the second story of a dilapidated old house, there, propped up by pillows, sat a sick child—a boy about the age of Billy. His face was wan and drawn by suffering and his hands, that rested on the window ledge, were skeleton-like in their thinness. His face was turned upward as if to catch the full benefit of the bright Easter Day sunshine, and the shadowy eyes looked longingly into the soft, white clouds that drifted like angels across the blue heavens.

"There!" half-whispered little Ellen, touching Billy's arm and directing his attention to the sick boy. "See, there's a poor boy, sick—a boy about the same size as you, too, which makes me feel all the more sorry for him, for it makes me think that you might be sick, and maybe poor, with no one to care whether you had a pleasant Easter or not."

Billy looked up, then, boy-like, he whistled to attract the sick child's attention. "The little boy's eyes tell me, from the heavy clouds to the two roses, down, a very serious expression on his face. Naturally he was a mischievous fellow, full of innocent fun and light-heartedness, but when occasion demanded it he was serious and capable of great things.

In a minute he turned toward the sick boy and said: "What's the matter with having Sunday school right here today? We've got the flowers—the Easter lilies—and your mother can be superintendent, while Ellen will run and fetch mamma to be teacher. We kids will be the class."

"Yes, yes!" excitedly agreed Ellen, running from the room and down the stairs before the woman or sick boy could say a word. In half an hour, she returned, accompanied by her mother, who brought Sunday school letters, a song book, some story papers, etc.

Just as the Easter bells all over the city began to peal forth, the occupants of that poor room knelt close to the sick child's chair, repeating together the Lord's Prayer. Then followed a song, led by Ellen in her sweet clear voice. The hymn was an old one and both the sick child and his mother were familiar with it, and it swelled Billy's generous heart to hear the sick boy's voice join in the chorus, and ment warning the chill atmosphere; and the love divine filled the hearts of all as Billy's and Ellen's mother knelt in prayer, thanking her Creator for the great blessings bestowed upon her—and the world—in the persons of her noble little son and daughter.

Again that day Ellen and Billy came to that poor home with baskets—baskets containing a fine Easter dinner for the sick boy and his mother. And during the months that followed Billy, Ellen and their mother came daily to assist the poor widow and her dear boy Charlie, who, as the summer became warm, recovered from his long illness.

"All this good comes from looking about you," said Ellen to Billy one evening.

"Which goes to prove that 'rubbering' is a good thing," returned Billy.

"Yes, especially on Easter Sunday," agreed Ellen; for if there is any certain day in all the year when all persons should give love and charity to those in loneliness and need, it is the Holy Easter.

Life in the Marsh.

BY LYNDON BURKE.

Billy Bullfrog went out on the bank, where the mud was just beginning to bake, and sunned himself. He noticed the cracks in the mud, the shimmer of the water at the edge of the creek, the wild touch-me-nots growing in the marsh nearby, and thought it all made a beautiful scene.

Skinny Snakefeeder flew over the rushes and reeds and through the willows where the gnats were thick, and looking down at the mud walls, built by the crawfish, thought how good life was.

Tommy Turtle slowly crawled out on the bare log that projected out of the water and sunned himself and thought what a fine old world this is—how genial and warm.

Charlie Catfish poked his mouth as he lay among roots in the water and noticed the air circles which he blew upward and thought how pleasant it was to live in the water and how he would dislike to live in the air like Skinny Snakefeeder does.

"There is no one quite so big or so handsome as I am," said Billy Bullfrog.

"I can fly or I can walk on land or I can swim over the water," said Skinny Snakefeeder. "What an accomplished creature to be sure."

Tommy Turtle heard a slight noise and drew himself entirely into his shell. "It is a pity, everything hasn't a house on its back," said he.

And Charlie Catfish lunged midway between the bottom and the surface of the water scarcely moving, and yet at perfect ease. "I am the only thing around here that can do that," he said.

Just then a man happened along and shot at Billy Bullfrog, who hopped far out into the stream and then arose to the top, a corpse.

"They didn't shoot me," said Skinny Snakefeeder, because I can fly.

"They don't shoot me, because I can swim where they can't see me. Everybody ought to hide in the water," said Tommy Turtle.

"They don't shoot me," said Tommy Turtle, "because my skin is thick. Everybody ought to carry a house with him."

But Charlie Catfish saw a nice fat worm drop down near him, and he snapped at it and was caught.

"They don't catch me," said Skinny Snakefeeder, for I have my eyes wide open. Everybody ought to have his eyes wide open."

"They don't catch me," said Tommy Turtle, "because I am always at home. But a dog, happening to spy Tommy Turtle on the log, crept noiselessly toward him, took him in his mouth and carried him to the shore, where the master turned him on his back and left him helpless."

"No one can catch me and no one can hold me by turning me on my back," said Skinny Snakefeeder. "Everybody ought to keep his eyes open."

But as he spoke a bird swooped down and devoured him.

Neither Tommy Turtle nor Billy Bullfrog nor Charlie Catfish criticised him, because when a thing dies it ceases to be critical.

And the yellow blossoms of the touch-me-not still added color to the green of the hedge, and the water continued to shimmer at the edge of baked mud where the crawfish towers down, a very serious expression on his face. Naturally he was a mischievous fellow, full of innocent fun and light-heartedness, but when occasion demanded it he was serious and capable of great things.

Accompanying this article are pictures of four Easter eggs. No. 1 shows the pretty effect of a cabbage rose. This is obtained by painting the surface of the egg to represent the closely folded petals of a rich red rose and fastening about its lower end a bunch of green tissue-paper leaves, the long points being wired to hold them in place about the egg. Such eggs are unique and pretty to adorn the breakfast table Easter morning, placing one on the folded white napkin at each plate. No. 2 shows an egg representing our idea of a "cranky"

Every Reader of This Paper

Who is desirous of making a strictly high grade, legitimate and safe investment, should carefully read every word of this advertisement as it offers an exceptional opportunity.

The American Coconut Oil Co. of Toledo, Ohio, offers 3000 shares of its capital stock, par value $100.00 per share, at $75.00 per share.

It is incorporated under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, which admit no stockholders' liability. The total capitalization is $1,000,000.00.

The Board of Directors who have entire charge of the affairs of this company are:

MR. THOS. H. TRACY, President, Law Firm of King and Tracy.
MR. E. W. TOLERTON, Vice-President, Attorney.
MR. C. F. M. NILES, Treasurer, Security Savings Bank and Trust Co.
MR. C. E. B. LAMSON, Lamson Bros. Dry Goods Co.
MR. Z. U. DODGE, Secretary.

The personnel of this Board of Directors IS A GUARANTEE of good faith and that all the statements made in its Prospectus are to be relied upon.

The purpose of this corporation is to extract the oil from the dried meat of the coconut, commercially called Copra. As refined oil, it is used in vast quantities by soap manufacturers, and as a butter product by confectioners. Heretofore, France, principally, has been supplying the world with this commodity for the reason that she has been successful in procuring the largest proportion of the world's production of Copra. Since the American occupation of the Philippines, the American Coconut Oil Co. has been able to contract for sufficient quantity of Copra to meet the annual capacity of its factory. This arrangement necessitated the conditional stipulation that 20 per cent. of the stock of this Company be placed with Filipino investors. This has been done, and constitutes one of the strongest features of our proposition—that of co-operation with the natives. A mill site has been purchased at Pagbilao Bay, containing 112 acres with 2 1/2 miles of water frontage, about 65 miles south of Manila, on Luzon Island. The selection of machinery for the work is now being completed.

The business management of this Company is vested in a Board of Control, of which the Hon. Benito Legarda, of Manila, has accepted the Chairmanship. Mr. Legarda, who has subscribed for 1,000 shares of the stock, is one of the wealthiest and ablest men in the Philippine Islands, and of whom the Secretary of War of the United States, Wm. H. Taft, addressed this corporation in part, as follows:

"Mr. Benito Legarda is one of my most intimate friends. He has great business ability, has amassed a fortune, and is a man of integrity. He is one of the most influential business men among the Filipinos in Manila. I should think he would be desirable as a stockholder in any corporation in the Philippines. He is now, as you know, a member of the Philippine Commission. I should doubt, if you could get a man of better business judgment, of more wealth, and higher integrity, than Benito Legarda."

"Very sincerely yours,"
Signed, "WM. H. TAFT."

Mr. Geo. S. Andres, formerly Superintendent of Pacific Oil and Lead Works of San Francisco, is under contract to act as General Manager of this Company. He was in the employ of above concern for twenty years and is recognized as an expert in the Coconut Oil business. His improved processes are deposited with Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Co. of Toledo, who acts as Trustee for the Stockholders of this Company.

By summing up the facts here presented and the evidence of keen, capable, business management of which this corporation is assured, we believe all who are interested in our proposition will readily grasp the situation. Our Prospectus goes more thoroughly into detail, and we shall be pleased to mail it to any who desire.

Fill in your name and address in the form at the lower right hand corner of this advertisement, and mail to

Z. U. DODGE, Fiscal Agent

American Coconut Oil Co., Suite 359 Spitzer Bldg., Toledo, Ohio.

SOURCE OF PROFIT.

We show here why it is possible to make a greater profit in the manufacture of Coconut Oil from Copra in the Philippine Islands where the Coconut is grown, than exporting the Copra to foreign countries and there making the extractions, as is now done in France, Germany and the United States. To illustrate the situation, when the price of Copra in Manila was $47.00 a ton, the price of even date at Marseilles, Hamburg, New York and San Francisco was $57.00 a ton, showing the cost to be about $48.00 a ton in the transporting of Copra from Manila to the different points owing to export duties, transportation, commission, brokerage and a considerable loss due to shrinkage in long sea voyages.

The value of Copra is governed entirely by the supply and demand.

The possible net profit of our works in the Philippines at about $40.00 a ton, with a capacity of 25,000 tons per annum will be $1,000,000, being 100% on our capitalization.

We do not increase the world's production but merely change the base of operations.

Yearly export of Copra from the Philippines about 100,000 tons.

There is no shrinkage on the finished product and it is shipped in condensed form.

We can show still larger profits in utilizing the by-products which are unobtainable by foreign countries.

Easter Day—Its Origin

It is probable that Easter received its name from the Saxon goddess Eostre, whose festival was kept about the same season each year as Easter.

In the ancient church the celebration of Easter lasted eight days, but in later times it was limited to two or three days. It used to be a festival of pleasure as well as a time for generosity and the performing of good deeds. Alms were given to the needy, the sick were visited by the rich and great, and often slaves were freed and poor unfortunate suffering imprisonment liberated. Services were held during the whole week preceding Easter Sunday, on which day people greeted each other with kisses, saying: "He is risen!" the response being: "He is risen, indeed!" In the Greek Church this custom is still observed.

The costume of exchanging eggs on Easter—or during Holy Week—is a very old one and symbolizes the Resurrection or renewed life.

Easter Day is always the first Sunday after the full moon which comes upon or next after the 21st of March, which date is the beginning of the old year.

If the full moon comes on Sunday, Easter Day falls on the Sunday following.

FISHING AND SHOOTING.

A new region, now accessible for the first time by rail, and known as the "Temagami" (pronounced Tem-mag-a-mee) District, is being brought to the notice of the public as one of the best fishing and hunting confines in Canada. Excellent sport is assured all who take advantage of a trip to this magnificent territory which is situated 300 miles north of the city of Toronto at an altitude of 1,000 feet above the sea. Black bass speckled trout, lake trout, wall-eyed pike and other species of fish are found here in abundance, and large game such as moose, caribou and deer abound in the forests. A handsome booklet, profusely illustrated, giving all information including comprehensive maps can be had free on application to W. Robinson, T. P. A., 506 Park Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The little folks love Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Pleasant to take; perfectly harmless; positives cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma.

Tickle, tickle my black hen.
She lays good eggs for gentlemen;
Gentlemen come every day,
To see what my black hen doth lay.
Find one of the gentlemen.

When Ma's Away

When ma's away we have sash fun.
We eat up all the pies an' cake;
Then out we go to romp and run;
And such a noise we always make!

We scream and yell, and sometimes fight.
The blessed time that ma's away;
And when she comes we're a sight,
And then what follows is n't play.

Ma gets a big, long limber stick,
And sets to work with right good will.
To think it over makes me sick!
But when she's done we all keep still.

Gully Gul.

BY CHARLES LINCOLN PHIFER.

The best little story that ever was told. Think the baby over the way. Is a story whose characters grow old.

Though named fifty times in a day; And he squirms and he laughs in the merriest tone.

Whenever the tale you begin, And he keeps up the laughter until you are done.

Then gurgles, "Tell it adin." The story is simple, the chapters are few.

You are left to imagine the plot. But the characters stand into prominent view.

And the feature one never forgets. Head Acher, Fore Pinter, Eye Winker, Tom Tinker.

Nose Smeller, Mouth Eater, Chin Chopper and Gully Gul.

When Tinker and Winker have sunk to repose, And Gully Gul cuddles to rest.

The poor weary mother tucks 'round them the clothes, And her lips to Head Acher are pressed.

Then, closing her eyes as she mutters a prayer, She seeks to peer through the dark vale.

And read in her wishes the story most dear. That the baby finds in the tale: But 'tis dashed with the rain of the tears falling fast.

And the shadows are hiding the sun; Oh, God! if reward will but follow at last, And end as good stories are spun.

For Head Acher, Fore Pinter, Eye Winker, Tome Tinker, Nose Smeller, Mouth Eater, Chin Chopper and Gully Gul.

THE EASTER BIRTH.

The Time of Penance Doing is Nearly Over and Now For Society's re-Birth—An Avalanche of Spring Festivities Will Now Be Celebrated and Many Pretty Entertainments Are Being Planned for the Early Spring.

The Ribbon Girl.
There's a ribbon for a collar,
There's a ribbon in her hair.
'Tis a ribbon forms a girdle,
Which she folds with greatest care.
She has frocks all trimmed with ribbons
Of attractive kinds and hues;
Decks her hats with ribbons jaunty,
And with ribbons ties her shoes.
All her lingerie is lovely,
With its ribbons run in lace;
And rosettes of dainty ribbon
Silken hose supporters grace.
Consume this girl's so fond of ribbons,
Savely will be fond of beans.
She will marry and be happy,
Well, she may—one never knows.
She will carry bridal roses
With their yards of ribbon tied.
In a coach with white be-ribboned
To the train in state she'll ride.
When the honeymoon is over,
Then the artful little thing
Will proceed to tie her husband
To her ribbon apron string.

For Mrs. Lufkin.

Mrs. Elgood Lufkin occupied the seat of honor at a prettily appointed dinner Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmer Murrell on west Market street.

Mrs. Stillman's Act Scorned.

The following conversation took place recently between a group of this summer's brides in Chicago:

"Sell our wedding gifts?" Never! cry the Spring brides.

And then I hear one small voice say, "No, never! But I might change them if I had the permission of the giver—or they never found out."

That was Violet Stone, who is to marry John Ryerson before the month is out.

All the discussion had been raised by the much-talked-of act of Mrs. J. A. Stillman, of New York, who calmly sent her duplicate wedding gifts off to a favorite second-hand dealer. In doing so, Mrs. Stillman declared her independence of conventions. Many hoped that the solution of the "duplicate wedding present" question had been reached.

Vain hope! All properly-minded brides scorn the compromise as unworthy.

Calls it Unfeeling.

"It's perfectly unfeeling!" said Helen Lord. "I would never think of doing such a thing. If any one was kind enough to give me a present, I should appreciate it. No! I wouldn't even change them—I don't believe. It seems so mercenary."

Violet Stone said: "Well, if I had several things just alike, and the giver didn't mind, I think I might change them for something I did very much want and need. I'm sure I'd appreciate it ever so much more and take more pleasure in the gift. No, I'd never sell a gift. It would simply take away the spirit of the gift—which is really the point of it all. Wedding gifts are never supposed to be anything you want, are they? If the present is from some one you know well, and you get permission, I don't see that it mightn't be a capital idea."

Worst Possible Taste.

"Certainly not," said Marguerite Pratt, frigidly. "I really cannot discuss anything so absurd. It seems to me the worst possible taste. No one not in actual need would not have any

DRESSY DESIGN FOR TAILORED BLOUSE.

The trig smartness of the tailor-made is cleverly combined with a dressy touch or two in this smart blouse which does not in the least detract from its distinctive tailored appearance. There is a square yoke over the shoulders, with just a little scoop taken at the inset of the sleeve which affords the new line, one that is less long than we have seen for some seasons. The sleeve is the tailored leg of mutton style, with but scant fullness for the pattern. The fronts are disposed with little hand-run tucks coming cross-wise with the over-laid box plait which serves to conceal the fastening. The back is arranged in bretelle pleats, these running from the shoulder seams down, and curving in toward the centre of the back of the waistline. The neck is cut out a trifle at the throat, and banded with crease velvet, which accords well with the pale pink silk wrap Henrietta of the blouse. This same velvet fashions the belt, which is feathered to shape back and front, and fastened with a handsome buckle. Fancy buttons are used liberally, and the upturned cuffs, the high collar and the little wing reverses at the throat are all embroidered in scarlet and gold.

excuse for selling gifts given them at their wedding."

"I'd be insulted if any one sold a present I'd given them," said Alice West. "If anything ought to be sacred it should be a gift of that sort. The associations ought to be so dear that no other thing, no matter how useful, could take the place of what had been received at your wedding."

Mrs. Stillman, who made all the talk by her unprecedented action, is the daughter-in-law of the millionaire New York banker, James Stillman. She belongs to one of the best known families in America, her grand uncle being Bishop Potter. She is the daughter of James Brown Potter and of Cora Urquhart, the noted actress.

The Philomatheans.

Mrs. Dr. Johnson was at home to the Philomathean circle Monday evening. Roll call, current events were given, and a paper "Contemporaries of Millet," by Mrs. Avann. Miss Helen Mackenzie talked on the "Viceroy of India," while Mrs. Daniel Hadsell gave an interpretation, "Art," Emerson.

Surprised.

Surprised indeed was Miss Daisy Lantz on Monday evening, when the following friends invaded her home or Bellefontaine avenue and made the hours very merry: Ilo Fleet, Hazel Crist, Josie Cooper, May Scott, Dolly Munnagh, Vesta Murray, Leona Butler, Mrs. Queen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Scott.

The Twentieth Century.

The Twentieth Century club met Monday with Mrs. Richie at her home on north Washington street. Quotations were given from Shakespeare and the lesson, "The Taming of the Shrew," conducted by Miss Freeman. Mrs. Myvanwy Jones gave a much appreciated reading. A social half hour followed the program.

Soon to Leave.

Mrs. Frank Griffen, who has been the honored guest at so many functions, while visiting her parents Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Vail, will leave the early part of May for her home in Portland, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pangle, of west Spring street will accompany her there, where they will remain indefinitely among relatives.

Honoring a Birthday.

Miss Cora Kepner, of east High street, entertained pleasantly on Wednesday evening, the affair being arranged for her eighteenth birthday. Games and music were enjoyed and a delicious lunch served to Miss Ada Powers, Miss Madie Baker, Miss Anna Kepner, Mrs. Ella Engle, Mrs. Cora Miller, Mr. Will Reggan, Mr. Alfred Rueth, Mr. Robert White, Mr. Floyd Van Pelt, and Mr. Samuel Miller.

Next Week's Wedding.

Early next week will occur at Marion the marriage of Miss Snyder, of Marion, Ohio, and Mr. George Dingle, manager of the Lima Chatel Loan Company, of this city. Mr. Dingle left for Marion this week and after the marriage will bring his bride to this city where they will occupy a cozy suite of rooms in the Thomas flats on south Main street.

Evening at Pedro.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Landis entertained about forty friends at Pedro on Thursday evening at their home on south Collett street. The rooms were beautiful in their spring dress of peonies, tulips and other bright flowers. Mrs. Dr. Landick received the prize for her skill at the contest, a very pretty drawn work center piece. Mrs. Louis Fall secured the consolations. Refreshments closed the pleasures.

The Matinee Club.

The young ladies who are members of the Bridge Whist club have never given their little circle a name. Thursday it was decided to be known hereafter as the Matinee club. Miss Lillian Campbell was the hostess and very hospitably indeed did she entertain the members and one guest, Miss Goodyear, of Hastings, Michigan. Luncheon was served at one o'clock at perfectly laid tables. A dainty basket of Marguerites and roses was placed in the center of each table where was offered a menu of six courses. Miss Katherine Oxley received a prize, a box of gloves.

At Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Albrecht, who celebrated their wedding anniversary yesterday, were surprised by their friends who are members of the Hi-watha club. The guests came prepared to serve a delicious dinner and all the delicacies of the season were enjoyed. The evening was spent with music and a social hour.

AT THE FAUROT.

Tuesday, Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar in "Mama's Papa."
Friday, Harrison J. Wolfe in "The Open Gate."
The Triumph of an Empress."

William A. Brady's long heralded new musical comedy will be the attraction at the Faurot opera house next Tuesday night, with Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar at the head of a very clever company of fifty people. Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar have left the familiar field of "Foxy Grandpa" and will be seen in this big musical comedy which is one of the most important musical offerings of the season and which just closed a six weeks' engagement at Chicago.

Added to a story brim full of screamingly funny complications, Mr. Brady presents a chorus of strikingly beautiful girls, a production that is elaborate and beautiful to a degree, and a host of novelties in the way of musical specialties that are calculated to arouse a great deal of discussion.

The costuming of the piece, it is said, will be very beautiful. There are eleven picture numbers, in five of which some novel effects are to be seen. Possibly one of the most startling is the "Four O'Clock on Broadway," which presents a picture of the far famed Flatiron building on a windy afternoon. The stage is perforated to allow of the use of fans beneath as well as at the sides. Other pretty musical numbers are "The Choo Choo Cars," "Fighting for the U. S. A.," "What Did the Woggle Bug Say?" "Puff, Puff, Puff," a smoke song with electrical puffs and rapiers, "My Blushing Rose," with an American Beauty effect, "The Fate of the Sailor," a nautical song, "My Filipino Belle," "Two Sides of a Story" and a conversation number, "Jane, Jane, Jane."

One of the most remarkable phases of the theatrical season in New York has been the great and sudden success of short plays. Pieces of this sort long have been popular in Paris, where they are presented at the Theatre Antoine, but their rapid accession to prosperity in New York has been both surprising and interesting. Frank Keenan has presented a series of short comedies and tragedies at the Berkeley Lyceum. Mrs. Fisk has offered four one-act plays at a matinee at the Manhattan Theatre and Arnold Daly has been giving George Bernard Shaw's two interesting fragments, "A Man of Destiny," and "How He Lied to Her Husband." In view of all these things it is interesting to note the coming to this city of Harrison J. Wolfe, who on the evening of next Friday at the Faurot opera house, will be seen in a series of these sketches. The most important of the series is Daniel Fishman's famous little playlet, "The Open Gate," while the remainder of the program will be made up of two other pieces of equal interest. Mr. Wolfe is an actor of much standing who has starred successfully in "Hamlet" for several years and his own company—though necessarily small, includes many prominent people. There is every indication that the engagement in this city will be most successful.

Mildred Holland.

Undoubtedly the dramatic treat of the season in Lima will be Edward C. White's classic production of "The Triumph of an Empress" at the Faurot opera house Saturday afternoon and evening, in which Mildred Holland portrays Catherine the Great of Russia which is the best part ever written for her. The author in writing the role of Catherine for Miss Holland, has at all times had her extraordinary talents thoroughly in mind. He has not placed the character on a pedestal of improbability, but has made the great Empress essentially human, at the same time illustrating her notable characteristics, as related by the best historians. Not even the most obtuse critic can fail to note the exquisite art with which Miss Mildred Holland portrays this character.

The Boston Traveler says: "Miss Holland has jumped at one bound, figuratively speaking, into the good graces of Boston theatre goers, and has, beyond question, established herself as a star of the first rank. Her conception and acting of the part of Catherine has shown that she is a great artist. Miss Holland's supporting company is one of the best ever organized. There has never been a purely dramatic production more gorgeously staged."

Minstrelsy has been, and promises to continue to be, the favorite form of amusement for four-fifths of the theatre-going public—and well it should be—for no manner of a performance can include such a variety of material necessary for the edification of the multitudes; besides it is the cleanest and best of all amusements. Then, there are no waits.

Promptly at the appointed hour the curtain rises, and from that moment until the final you have fun without a blinch. Songs of sentiment by the world's greatest vocalists, comic ditties by the best comedians, who also furnish humor without a taint. The songs have been sung; jokes have been told; the Adonis like person in the middle has his friendly repartee with the various comedians with the bones and "Tambos." Personal grace has been shown and beauty added because of the handsome paraphernalia used in the first part settings.

The sentiment of the balladist may have caused you to be possessed of a feeling of intoxication; the festive wit of the comedians has amused you; the charming acts of the first part in its entirety has possibly astonished you, yet the glamor, frolic and fun rolls up without a hindrance. There's no tiresome overture, but on the contrary the various novel feats gathered from all quarters of the globe commence, and ere the finish has been reached you have, with your brother auditors, proclaimed minstrelsy the king of amusements. This organization will appear at the Faurot opera house soon.

It fills the arteries with rich, red blood. Makes new flesh and healthy men and women. That's what Holliester's Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.

As I lifted my head Uncle Eb whispered "Hark!" and we both listened. A bent and aged figure came stalking into the twilight. His long white hair mingled with his beard and covered his coat collar behind.

"Don't be scared," said Uncle Eb. "Tain't no bear. It's nuthin' but a poet."

I knew him for a man who wandered much and had a rhyme for every one—a kindly man, with a reputation for laxness and without any home.

"Whin," said the poet.

"Whin," said Uncle Eb.

"I'm biffin over 'n the next back," said the poet, sitting down.

"How's everything in Jingleville?" Uncle Eb inquired.

Then the newcomer answered:

"Well, neighbor dear, in Jingleville we live by faith, but we eat our fill."

"An' what 'd we do if it want fer prayer?"

"For we can't raise a thing but whiskers an' hair."

"Cur'us how you can talk poetry," said Uncle Eb.

"The only thing I've got ag'in you is them whiskers an' that hair," said the poet.

"Tain't what's on the head, but what's in it—that's the important thing," said the poet.

"Did I ever tell ye what I wrote about the birds?"

"Dare know 's ye ever did," said Uncle Eb, stirring his hair.

"The boy'll like it mebbe," said the poet, taking a dirty piece of paper out of his pocket and holding it to the light.

The poem interested me, young as I was, not less than the strange figure of the old poet who stood unknown in the backwoods and who said I dare say with many a finer song in his heart.

I remember how he stood in the twilight and chanted the words in a sing-song tone. He gave us that rude copy of the poem, and here it is:

THE ROBIN'S WEDDING.

Young robin, reborn, was a beautiful bird, an' he says to his love, says he:

"It's ready now on a rocking bough, in the top of a maple tree."

I've lined it with down an' the velvet brown on the waist of a buntings."

They were married next day in the land of the bay, and the day was a beautiful one."

The wedding cake and the wife of the same."

An' the lark an' the fiddle de dee."

An' the crow came down in a minister gown—there was nothing but a white sheet."

He fluttered his wing as they sat him to bed, an' he tried to clear out his throat."

He hummed an' he hawed an' he hawed an' he hawed, a note."

The swallow was there, an' he ushered each pair, with his flower an' a clasp hammer note."

The scolding tried for a flirt with the bride, an' she says to her maid an' her maid:

"The notes that he took as he salvered an' shook."

And a sound like the jingle of gold."

He sat on a brier an' laughed at the choir an' said that the music was old."

The sexton he came—Mr. Spider by name—a citizen hairy and gray."

His rope in a steeple, he called the good people."

That live in the land of the bay."

The ants an' the quags an' the cockles an' bugs came out in a mighty array."

Some came down from Barleytown an' the neighboring city of Rye."

The little black people they climbed every steeple."

And sat looking up at the sky."

They came for a wedding an' they furnished the cake an' the pie."

I remember he turned to me when he had finished and took one of my small hands and held it to his hard palm and looked at it and then into my face.

"An' boy," he said, "you may shall lead you far from here, and you shall get learning and wealth and win many victories."

"What nonsense are you talking, Jed Feary?" said Uncle Eb.

"Oh, you all think I'm a fool an' a humbug cos I look it. Why, Eben Holden, if you was what ye looked ye'd be in the presidential chair. Folks here 's the valley think o' nuthin' but hard work, mount uv 'em, an' I tell ye now this boy ain't ag'in t' be with patty an' a farm. Look at them slender hands."

"There was a man come to me the other day an' wanted t' hev a poem about his wife that had jes' died. I ust b'ya t' tell me all 'bout hev."

"What," said he after he had scratched his head an' thought a minute, 'she was a dretful go, a woman t' work."

"Anything else?" I asked.

"He thought ag'in fer a minute."

"Broke her leg once," he said, "an' was laid up fer more'n a year."

"You shall get learning and wealth."

"Must 'a suffered," said I.

"Not then," he answered. "Rather enjoyed it layin' abed an' readin' an' bein' rubbed, but 'twas hard on the children."

"Spone ye loved her," I said.

"Then the tears come into his eyes, an' he couldn't speak fer a minute. Purty soon he whispered 'Yes, kind o' confidential. Course he loved her, but these Yankees are ashamed o' their feelings. They hev tender thoughts, but they hide 'em as careful as the wild goose hides her eggs. Tell an' slave an' scribbler an' scribe—there's 'bout all we think up in this country. Tain't right, Holden."

"No, tain't right," said Uncle Eb.

"I know I'm a poor, miserable critter. Kind o' o' tune with everybody I know. Allus quarreled with my own folks, an' now I ain't got any home. Some day I'm goin' t' die in the poor-house or on the ground under these woods. But I tell ye—here he spoke in a voice that grew loud with feeling—

"mebbe I've been any, as they say, but I've got more out o' my life than any o' these fools. An' some day God 'll honor me far above them."

"I know Dave Brower's folks hev got brains an' decency, but when that boy he old enough t' take care o' himself let him git out o' this country. I tell ye he'll never make a farmer, an' if he marries an' settles down here he'll git t' be a poet mebbe or some such shiftless cuss—an' die in the poor-house. Guess I better git back t' my whin! Good night," he added, rising and buttoning his old coat as he walked away.

"Singlar man," Uncle Eb exclaimed thoughtfully, "but any one that picks him up ter a foot 'll find him a counterfeiter."

Young as I was, the rugged, eloquent power of the old poet had somehow got to my heart and stirred my imagination. It all came out fully to my understanding much later. Little by little it grew upon me, and what an effect it had upon my thought and life ever after I should not dare to estimate. And soon I sought out the "poet of the hills" as they called him, and got to know him and even to respect him in spite of his untidy aspect.

Uncle Eb skinned the holding, snatched more wood on the fire and sang, and pulled off his boots and lay down beside me under the robe. And, hearing the hell of the snore and the crackle of the burning logs in the arch, I soon went asleep.

I remember feeling Uncle Eb's hand upon my cheek and how I rose and stared about me in the fading shadows of a dream as he shook me gently.

"Wake up, my boy," said he. "Come, we mus' put fer home."

The fire was out. The old man held a lantern as he stood before me, the blaze flickering. There was a fearful darkness all around.

"Come, Willie, make haste," he whispered as I rubbed my eyes. "Put on yer boots, an' here's yer little coat an' mauler."

There was a mighty roar in the forest and icy puffs of snow came whirling in upon us. We stored the robes and palls and buckets and covered the big kettle.

The lofty tree tops reeled and creaked above us, and a deep, sonorous moan was sweeping through the woods as if the fingers of the wind had touched a mighty harp string in the timber. We could hear the crash and thunder of falling trees.

"Make haste! Make haste! It's risky here," said Uncle Eb, and he held my hand and ran. We started through the brush and steered as straight as we could for the clearing. The little box of light he carried was soon snatched in snow, and I remember how he stopped, half out of breath, once and brushed it with his mittens to let out the light. We had made the scattering growth of little timber at the edge of the woods when the globe of the lantern snapped and fell. A moment later we stood in utter darkness. I knew for the first time then that we were in a bad fix.

"I guess God 'll take care of us, Willie," said Uncle Eb. "If he don't we'll never get there in this world—never!"

It was a black and icy wall of night and storm on every side of us. I never saw a light when the light of God's heaven was so utterly extinguished: the cold never went to my bone as on that bitter night. My hands and feet were numb with aching as the roar of the trees grew fainter in the open. I remember how I legged and how the old man urged me on and how we toiled in the wind and darkness, straining our eyes for some familiar thing. Of a sudden we stumbled upon a wall that we had passed an hour or so before.

"Oh!" he groaned, and made that funny, deprecating chuck with his tongue that I have heard so much from Yankee lips.

"God o' mercy," said he, "we've gone round in a half circle! Now we'll take the wall an' mebbe it'll bring us home."

I thought I couldn't keep my feet any longer, for an irresistible drowsiness had come over me. The voice of Uncle Eb seemed far away, and when I awoke in the snow and shut my eyes to sleep he shook me as a terrier shakes a rat.

"Wake up, my boy," said he; "ye musn't sleep."

Then he boxed my ears until I cried and picked me up and ran with me along the side of the wall. I was but dimly conscious when he dropped me under a tree whose bare twigs lashed the air and stung my cheeks. I heard him tearing the branches savagely and muttering, "Thanks to God, it's the blue beech." I shall never forget how he turned and held to my hand and put the whip on me as I lay in the snow, and how the sting of it started my blood. Up I sprang in a jiffy and howled and danced. The stout red bent and circled on the like a hoop of fire. Then I turned and tried to run, while he clung to my coat tails and every step I felt the stifling grab of the beech. There he lay, little seam across my cheek today that marks a footfall of one of those whips. In a moment I was as wide awake as Uncle Eb and needed no more stimulation.

The wall led us to the pasture lane, and there it was easy enough to make our way to the barnyard and up to the door of the house, which had a candle in every window. I remember, David was up and dressed to come after us, and I recall how he took Uncle Eb in his arms when he fell fainting on the doorstep and carried him to the lounge.

I saw the blood on my face as I passed the mirror, and Elizabeth Brower came rushing and gave me one glance and rushed out of doors with the dipper. It was full of snow when she ran in and tore the wrappings off my neck and began to rub my ears and cheeks with the cold snow, gilling loudly for Grandma Bismette.

She came in a moment and helped at the stripping of our feet and legs. I remember that she slit my trousers with the shears as I lay on the floor, while the others rubbed my feet with the snow. Our hands and ears were badly frosted, but in ten hours the whiteness had gone out of them and the returning blood burnt like a fire.

"How queer he started!" I heard them say when Uncle Eb first came to. And in a moment a roar of laughter broke from him.

"I'll never forget," said he presently, "if I live a thousand years the tickle I git that boy. But it hurt me worse'n a hurt him."

Then he told the story of the blue beech.

The next day was that "cold Friday" long remembered by those who felt its deadly chill, a day when water thrown in the magic air came down in clinking crystals and sheets of frost lay thick upon the windows. But that and the one before it were among the few days in that early period that lie like a rock under my character.

CHAPTER VIII.

GRANDMA BISNETTE came from Canada to work for the Browns. She was a big, cheerful woman with a dialect, an amiable disposition and a swart, wrinkled face. She had a loose front tooth that occupied all the leisure of her tongue. When she sat at her knitting the big tooth clicked incessantly. On every stretch her tongue went in and out and across it, and I, standing often by her knee, regarded the process with great curiosity.

The reader may gather much from these frank and homely words of Grandma Bismette: "When I luv my man, mon Die! I have two boys. An' when I come across I bring him with me. Abe he rough, but den he do bud man."

Abe was the butcher of the neighborhood. That red handed, stony hearted necessary man whom the Yankee farmer in that north country hires to do the cruel things that have to be done. He wore ragged, dirty clothes and had a voice like a steam whistle. His rough black hair fell low and mingled with his scanty beard. His hands were stained too often with the blood of some creature we loved. I always crept under the bed in Mrs. Brower's room when Abe came, he was such a terror to me, with his bloody work and noisy oaths. Such men were the cause of the cleanly homes in that country.

There was much to shock the ears and eyes of children in the life of the Jew. It was a fashion among the help to deride their speech with profanity for the mere sound of it, and the foul mouthings of low minded men spread like a pestilence in the fields.

Abe came always with an old bay horse and a rickety buckboard. His one foot on the dash as he rode gave the picture a dandified finish. The lash of his bull whip sang around him, and his great voice sent its blasts of noise ahead. When we heard a fearful yell and rattle in the distance we knew Abe was coming.

"Abe he come," said Grandma Bismette. "Mon Die, he make de kettle meck fly."

It was like the coming of a locomotive with roar of wheel and whistle. In my childhood as soon as I saw the cloud of dust I put for the bed and from his friendly cover would peek out often, but never venture far until the man of blood had gone.

To us children he was a marvel of wickedness. There were those who told how he had stood in the storm one night and dared the lightning to send the lightning upon him.

The dog Fred had grown so old and infirm that one day he sent for Abe to come and put an end to his misery. Every man on the farm loved the old dog, and not one of them would raise a hand to kill him. Hope and I heard what Abe was coming to do, and when the men had gone to the fields that summer morning we lifted Fred into the little wagon in which he had once drawn me and, starting back to the barn, stole away with him through the deep grass of the meadow until we came out upon the highroad far below.

We had planned to take him to school and make him a nest in the wood shed, where he could share our luncheon and be out of the way of peril. After a good deal of difficulty and heavy pulling we got to the road at last. The old dog, now blind and helpless, sat contentedly in the wagon while its wheels creaked and groaned beneath him. We had gone but a short way in the road when we heard the red bridge roar under rushing wheels and the familiar yell of Abe.

"We'd better run," said Hope, "er we'll git swore at."

I looked about me in a panic for some place to hide the party, but Abe was coming fast, and there was only time to pick up clubs and stand our ground.

"Here!" the man shouted as he pulled up alongside of it. "Where ye goin' with that dog?"

"Go way," I answered, between anger and tears, lifting my club in a threatening manner.

He laughed then—a loud guffaw that rang in the near woods.

"What'll ye give me," he asked, leaning forward, his elbows on his knees—"what'll ye give me if I don't kill him?"

I thought a moment. Then I put my hand in my pocket and presently took out my jackknife—that treasure Uncle Eb had bought for me—and looked at it fondly.

Then I offered it to him.

Again he laughed loudly.

"Anything else?" he demanded, while Hope set hanging the old dog that was looking for his fate.

"Got 40 cents that I saved for the fat," said I promptly.

Abe backed his horse and turned in the road.

"Yah, boy," he said, "tell 'em I've got home."

Then his great voice shouted "Ging!" the lash of his whip snaked in the air and off he went.

We were first to arrive at the schoolhouse that morning, and when the other children came we had Fred on a comfortable bed of grass in a corner of the wood shed. What with all the worry of that day I said my lessons poorly and went home with a load on my heart. Tomorrow would be Saturday; now were we to get food and water to the dog? They asked at home if we had seen old Fred, and we both declared we had not—the first lie that ever laid its burden on my conscience. We both saved all our bread and butter and doughnuts next day, but we had so many chores to do it was impossible to go to the schoolhouse with them. So we agreed to steal away that night when all were asleep and take the food from his hiding place.

In the excitement of the day neither of us had eaten much. They thought we were ill and sent up to bed early. When Hope came into my room above stairs late in the evening we were both desperately hungry. We looked at our store of doughnuts and bread and butter under my bed. We equaled it over.

"Won't you try one of the doughnuts?" I whispered, hoping that she would say yes so that I could try one also, for they did smell mighty good.

"I wouldn't be right," said she regretfully. "There ain't any more'n he'll want now."

"I wouldn't be right," I repeated, with a sigh, as I looked longingly at one of the big doughnuts. "Wouldn't bear t' do it—could you?"

"Don't seem as if I could," she whispered thoughtfully, her chin upon her hand.

Then she rose and went to the window.

"Oh, my, how dark it is!" she whispered, looking out into the night.

"Purty dark," I said, "but you needn't be 'fraid. I'll take care o' you. If we should meet a bear 'll growl right back at him. That's what Uncle Eb tol' me t' do. I'm awful stout—no man now! Can't nuthin' scare me."

We could hear them talking below stairs, and we went back to bed, intending to go forth later when the house was still. But, unfortunately for our adventure, I fell asleep.

It was morning when I opened my eyes again. We children looked sleepily at each other while outine breakfast. Then we had to be washed and increased in our best clothes to go to meeting. When the wagon was at the door and we were ready to start I had doughnuts and bread and butter in every pocket of my coat and trousers. I got in quickly and pulled the blanket over me so as to conceal the fullness of my pockets. We arrived so late I had no chance to go to the dog before we went into meeting. I was wearing boots that were too small for me, and when I entered with the others and sat down upon one of those straight backed seats of plain, unpainted pine my feet felt as if I had been caught in a bear trap. There was always such a silence in the room after the elder had sat down and adjusted his spectacles that I could hear the ticking of the watch he carried in the pocket of his broadcloth waistcoat. For my own part, I know I looked with too much longing for the good of my soul on the great gold chain that spanned the broad convexity of his stomach.

Presently I observed that a couple of young women were looking at me and whispering. Then suddenly I became aware that there were sundry protuberances on my person caused by bread and butter and doughnuts, and I felt very miserable indeed. Now and then as the elder spoke the loud, accusing neigh of some horse, tethered to the fence in the schoolyard, mingled with his thunder. After the good elder had been preaching an hour his big, fat body seemed to swim in my tears. When he had finished the choir sang. Their singing was a thing that appealed to the eye as well as the ear. Uncle Eb used to say it was a great comfort to see Elkanah Samson sing bass. His voices of the swift and the pauter had grown mild and tremulous and unsatisfactory and even absurd. Time had tamed the monsters of that imaginary wilderness, and I had begun to lose my respect for them. But one fear had remained with me as I grew older—the fear of the night man. Every boy and girl in the valley trembled at the mention of him. Many a time I had held awake in the late evening to hear the men talk of him before they went asleep—Uncle Eb and Tip Taylor. I remember a night when Tip said in a low, awesome tone that he was a ghost. The word carried into my soul the first thought of its great and fearful mystery.

"Years and years ago," said he, "there was a boy by the name of Nehemiah Brower. An' he killed another boy once by accident an' run away an' was drowned."

"Drowned?" said Uncle Eb.

"How?"

"In the ocean," the first answered, gazing. "Went away off round the world, an' they got a letter that said he was drowned on his way to Van Dieman's Land."

"To Van Dieman's Land?"

"Yes, an' some say the night man is the ghost o' the one he killed."

I remember waking that night and hearing excited whispers at the window near my bed. It was very dark in the room, and at first I could not tell who was there.

"Don't you see him?" Tip whispered.

"Where?" I heard Uncle Eb ask.

"Under the pine trees. See him move!"

At that time I was up at the window myself and could plainly see the dark figure of a man standing under the little pine below us.

"The night man, I guess," said Uncle Eb. "But he won't do no harm. Let him alone. He's gone away now."

We saw him disappear behind the trees, and then we got back into our beds again. I covered my head with the bedclothes and said a small prayer for the poor night man.

And in this atmosphere of mystery and adventure among the plain folk of Faraway, whose care of me when I was in great need, whose love of me always I count among the priceless treasures of God's providence, my childhood passed. And the day came near when I was to begin to play my poor part in the world.

It was a time of new things, that winter when I saw the end of my first year. Then I began to enjoy the finer humors of life in Faraway, to see with understanding and by God's grace to feel.

The land of play and fear and fable was now far behind me and I had begun to feel the infinite in the ancient forest in the everlasting hills, in the deep of heaven in all the ways of men. Hope Brower was now near womanhood. She had a beauty of face and form that was the talk of the country. "I have traveled far and been many a fair face, but never one more to my eye. I have heard men say she was like a girl out of a story book those days."

Years something had come between us. Long ago we had fallen out of each other's confidence, and ever since had seemed to shun me. I began to play with boys and she with girls. And it made me miserable to hear the boys a bit older than I gossip of her beauty and accuse each other of the sweet disgrace of love.

But I must hasten to those events in Faraway that shaped our destinies. And first comes that memorable night when I had the privilege of escorting Hope to the school library, where the argument of Jed Feary, poet of the hills, fired my soul with an ambition that has remained with me always.

Uncle Eb suggested that I ask Hope to go with me.

"France right up to her," he said, "an' say you'd be glad of the pleasure of her company."

It seemed to me a very dubious thing to do. I looked thoughtfully and turned red in the face.

"Young man," he continued, "the boy the's 'fraid o' women 'll never hev whiskers."

"How's that?" I inquired.

"Be scared t' death," he answered, "fore they've had time t' start. Ye want t' step right up t' the rack jes' if ye'd bought an' paid fer jesset; an' was proud o' yer bargain."

I took his advice, and when I found Hope alone in the parlor I came and asked her, very awkwardly as I now remember, to go with me.

She looked at me, blushing, and said she would ask her mother.

And she did, and we walked to the schoolhouse together that evening, her hand holding my arm timidly, the most serious pair that ever struggled with the problem of deportment on such an occasion. I was oppressed with a heavy sense of responsibility in every word I uttered.

Ann Jane Foster, known as "Scoopster Jane" for her rapid walk and stiff carriage, met us at the corners on her way to the schoolhouse.

"Big triumph, I guess," said she. "Jed Feary an' Squire Town is comin' over from Jingleville an' all the big guns 'll be there. I love t' hear Jed Feary speak. He's so techin'."

Ann Jane was always looking around for some event likely to touch her feelings. She went to every funeral in Faraway, and when sorrow was scarce in her own vicinity journeyed far in quest of it.

"Wouldn't wonder t' the fir new when they git t' goin'," she remarked, and then hurried on, her head erect, her body motionless, her legs flying. Such energy as she gave to the pursuit of mourning I have never seen equaled in any other form of dissipation.

The schoolhouse was nearly full of people when we came in. The big boys were wrestling in the yard. Men were lounging on the rude seats inside idly discussing dogs and cattle and lapsing into steeble frequently that bore the signs both of expectancy and reflection. Young men and young women sat together on one side of the house while perching and giggling. Alone among them was the big and eccentric granddaughter of Mrs. Bismette, who was always slapping some youngster for impertinence. Jed Feary and Squire Town sat together behind a pile of books, both looking very serious. The long hair and beard of the old poet were now white and his form bent with age. Life came over and spoke to us and took a curl of Hope's hair in his stiffened fingers and held it to the lamp.

"What silky gold!" he whispered. "A skein o' fate, my dear girl!"

Suddenly the schoolteacher rapped on the desk and bade us come to order, and Hanson Walker was called to the chair.

"That there is talent in Faraway township," he said, having reluctantly come to the platform, "and talent of the very highest order, no one can deny who has ever attended a lyceum at the Howard schoolhouse. I see evidence of talent in every face before me. And I wish to ask what are the two great talents of the Yankee—talents that made our forefathers famous the world over? I pause for an answer."

He had once been a schoolmaster, and that accounted for his didactic style.

"What are the two great talents of the Yankee?" he repeated, his hands clasped before him.

SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY.

Of the Present Management of the Daily News is Celebrated This Date.

Seven years ago this date the present management assumed control of the DAILY NEWS. At that time the equipment of the plant was not of a modern sort and but a four page paper was printed.

During the seven years improvements have been made from time to time, the paper has been increased to a seven column, eight, twelve, fourteen and sixteen page paper and the price reduced from 10 cents a week to four weeks for 25 cents. The number of papers printed daily at that time was a trifle over one thousand. With the increased circulation rapid strides were necessary in the mechanical department and today the DAILY NEWS' composing rooms and press rooms are the most complete in any in northwestern Ohio. Five years ago the first Linotype was installed at a cost of $4,000. The Hoe press, then in use with a capacity of 2,600, then considered up-to-date in Lima newspaperdom, was unable to take care of the large list of subscribers and was torn down and replaced with the Cox Duplex, which is one of the most complete and up-to-date newspaper presses manufactured. This press prints, folds, cuts and pastes papers complete ready for the street at the rate of 6,000 an hour. It is an expensive piece of machinery, the price of which is near $7000. The DAILY NEWS WAS THE FIRST PAPER IN LIMA TO PURCHASE ONE OF THESE PRESSES. With the increased number of columns to fill it was finally necessary to install another Linotype machine, and two of these wonderful pieces of mechanism are now kept going day and night.

As Lima progresses the DAILY NEWS will continue to keep pace and endeavor to serve its readers with a newspaper in every way is keeping with its home city.

The first issue of the DAILY NEWS was printed by the DeYarmon Brothers, Monday, November 22, 1897 and the reproduction of its initial "bow" will probably be read with interest.

GREETING TO ALL.

The LIMA DAILY NEWS is glad to meet you, good people. It is neither a stranger nor a newcomer in your beautiful city. It was born here. It is, therefore, in no sense an intruder. It is of legitimate issue and honorable ancestry. The only material difference between the method of its birth and that of the immigrant is that THE NEWS deliberately chose its own birthplace and sponsors.

It did this because it wanted to live in Lima. It wanted to call Lima its mother. It had a pre-natal affection for the name of this healthy and thriving city. It preferred Lima to other cities for several reasons. Chief among these reasons was the need in Lima of a brisk and enterprising evening paper. There is a field for it and a demand for it. THE DAILY NEWS is here, and it has come to stay.

Another reason why THE NEWS selected Lima as the place of its nativity was the musical euphony of the city's name. It is a simple and unpretentious name. It is not high-sounding and sonorous. There is no effort at pompousness in its modest title. Neither is there in the grandest name that ever thrilled the world! Brief and simple names are the best. They are the easiest spelled and remembered. Lima is a beautiful name. It is a safe title to swear by. Every body will instinctively want to read "THE LIMA DAILY NEWS."

We shall try to make it the "open sesame" of reliable, local and general information.

The mission of THE DAILY NEWS—so far as it shall act as a moulder of public opinion—shall be to add to the reputation, the business enterprise and the material development of Lima. We observe already manifold signs of activity and local pride. The merchant houses are commodious, clean and inviting. They are filled with attractive goods of the latest and best production. The people of Lima need not feel any impulse or inclination to visit distant cities to lay in supplies. The home stores and shops contain all that the heart can desire, and the prices are as reasonable as can be had at any metropolitan city in the land.

We note that Lima herself is not wanting in metropolitan features. She is substantially improving her streets. She has her full share of magnificent public buildings. Her court house is a model of architectural beauty and majesty. Her government building (the postoffice) is a structure that the state capital might well be proud of. Her churches are fitting temples for the worship of God. She is in all respects modern, progressive and ambitious.

Her railroad facilities are unrivalled. Six lines of transportation bring us into communication with the outside world. The C., H. and D. shops are among the numerous manufacturing interests. The Standard Oil Company has purchased the conspicuous southeast corner of North and Elizabeth streets, and will erect thereon a structure that will add in a large measure to the growth and reputation of the town.

Much more of a complimentary nature might be said here concerning the city of our adoption. It shall be our pleasure to say it hereafter, as the time and occasion may suggest.

As to the occasion of THE DAILY NEWS, perhaps it will be enough to say at this time that it will have opinions—on all subjects that shall demand public discussion. For the present it may be well to indulge a discreet mental reservation. A new-born paper should not be aggressive too early in its career. The present should be devoted to a careful and observant survey of the situation. So far as we can now see, there appears to prevail a wholesome public sentiment on most questions. It is never good to find fault. We should always look on the bright side of things, and only believe human nature bad when the overt act is committed. Cordially hoping to meet the citizens of Lima, we leave the latch-string with in easy reach of the humblest citizen.

LOVE—A DISEASE.

De Maurice Fleury, a Frenchman, arises to say that love is a disease and to declare it a fact that a man or woman may actually die of it.

This is neither new nor astonishing. It has long and generally been known that French love in particular is a disease.

There is but one known remedy—marriage.

De Maurice Fleury says he finds two kinds of love, good and bad. The good kind is a positive benefit to the victim, something like typhoid fever, for illustration, which leaves you, if you live through it, better than you were before.

The bad kind, he says, is something as deadly and dangerous as any strong intoxicant. This kind generally attacks those of weak constitution, such as readily catch grip, appendicitis, or any other disease fad.

So then, to escape the intoxicating malady, according to De Maurice Fleury, we must build up the system, take tonics and exercise in the open air. Even if you are now suffering from it you may thus cure yourself perfectly.

In a little while, it is safe to presume, patent medicines for the various kinds of love will be on sale at cut prices.

This is progress. Cupid, the divine, elusive sprite, has now been captured and bound to the dissecting table; with scalpel and saw and steady hands his wings have been detached, his heart laid bare and his nerves delicately lifted from their tissues.

It now remains only for some eminent scientist to add the information that the love disease is contagious and is transmitted by kissing.

POLITICS AND THE PULPIT.

Shall the pulpit take part in politics? This old question is presented with recurring prominence. It may be noted that the most vigorous negative comes from those who fall most directly under the ministerial condemnation.

"Let the preachers stick to religion and keep out of politics," now is the man with a city job. The man of cloth, with a liberal politician in his congregation or something of a pull himself, is prone to echo the cry.

But where is the logic? Must a man who is devoting his life to the teaching of morality talk only of the wickedness of those who have been dead for thousands of years? What would be said of a minister who saw a murder committed and refused to raise a hand on behalf of the victim if he argued that the prevention of the crime was no part of his business? Must he stand supinely by and witness gambling, municipal robbery and kindred vices go unchecked, yet fear to raise his voice because, forsooth, he would not be talking "religion?"

It would be interesting to know just what ideals of priestly ethics are held by those who advocate depriving the minister of the gospel of the right to free speech as a public citizen and leader of thought. Certainly the rule is not accepted in other countries, for it is announced that Dr. Gore, recently enthroned as first bishop of Birmingham, England, has "a passion for social reform and ardor for securing the highest ideals in the government of state."

It does not follow that the views advanced in this regard by the pulpit are correct, for it scarcely claims to speak ex-cathedra on such topics, but the argument that it must be barred from discussing public affairs or pointing out public wrongs must be open to the suspicion of being inspired by those who fear such potent criticism.—Toledo Times.

GRANDFATHER ROCKEFELLER.

A New York correspondent draws a pleasing picture of an old man and a boy and girl on the beach at Point Pleasant, N. J.

The young ones had mapped out an elaborate system of houses, fortifications and canals. Their entire working force consisted of an old man who wore a golf cap. As the old man bent to his labors under the direction of the children the perspiration ran down his face.

"Oh, that isn't the way, grandpa. Can't you ever learn? Here, let me show you," said the boy as he took the shovel from the old man's hands. "Do it that way."

And very meekly grandpa bent over his task until he was called by the little girl.

"Drampa, you didn't build my house right. Drampa, you got it all crooked. Here, drampa, do it all over again."

The old man got down on his knees and dug up the sand. Soon a large automobile dashed up and the chauffeur alighted, touched his hat and said, "It's about 4 o'clock, Mr. Rockefeller."

The richest man in the world straightened up and said, "Dear me, is that so?" And most reluctantly he left the beach.

This is one side of Mr. Rockefeller the world seldom sees. And the sight of it is the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin.

To rich or poor, high or low, "heartiness" grows close to the ground.

No man can become so rich and none so poor but that he may find his highest happiness in the simplest things—a stretch of sand, a shimmer of sunshine, the prattle of his grandchildren.

John D. Rockefeller may be the wealthiest man in America, as he is the richest, but there must be some good left in him.

And he cannot get any more out of life than you can—perhaps not nearly so much.

And therefore why envy him, or why fret yourself to be forceful and rich in your day and generation. The law of compensation holds.

A BANNER DAY.

On March 23rd, 1905, the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad banded on its lines east of Buffalo and not including the Boston & Albany Division, 30,043 freight cars. This required 621 trains, with an average of 48 cars to the train, and was in addition to more than 1000 passenger trains on these lines during all the day's business of one American railroad.

It is a wonder that the press of two continents calls this "America's Greatest Railroad!"

The people of this county are now offered a Chicago daily for $1 a year. The Chicago Daily Review is sent to subscribers for $1 a year, 75 cents for six months, 50 cents for three months, and stopped when the time is out. The Daily Review is a delightful family paper with all the news of the day condensed into four pages, hence the low price. It is printed in large, clear type, easily read by young and old, and publishes a brilliant magazine feature by a popular author every day, besides much good poetry and interesting departments devoted to science and invention, art, literature, music, education, hygiene, home management, fashions, humor, sports, and recreation, travels, matters of interest to women and children, etc. It is a clean family paper and admits nothing to its reading or advertising columns that cannot be read aloud in the family circle. The Daily Review has subscribers in every state in the union, and every county and township in this and surrounding states. It is just the daily paper for busy farmers and business men, professional men and their families. Subscribe for the Daily Review today. Send one dollar to Chicago Review Co., room 499, No. 1323 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., and receive this fine paper every day except Sunday for a whole year.

MADELINE'S SELFISHNESS

By MARAVENE KENNEDY

Copyright, 1904, by G. T. Feltner

Indulgent grace irritated Harding. Her serene, audacious loveliness, her eyes looked out from under her lashes mockingly.

"Your silence means that I am going to be shorted. Don't, I may as well say, your interest and think you're with me. With all your wisdom and your philosophy you're only a selfish creature, you know."

"You only would fall in love with me," she wheedled. "Think how it would develop your character to put under emotion underfoot! And destructive to me to see your love, to know that not even love can make you condone my indifference."

"Your conceit," he added caustically. "I'm thinking of my own affairs, not yours, unfortunately." A weariness, unbecomingly, she said, "I shall have to make an ass of myself and go out of business. My culture has involved me deeply. I pay Mercer I could pull off but I can't raise even $1,000. The other claims against the money is very close now."

"I've got to go to the city and take a look at your affairs," she said.

"Do you assign?" she asked.

"I'll give myself every week. I can. Something may come out of it."

"We shall lose you and your knowledge, and I shall be from your rebuking tongue. Truly sorry, Duncan, that you did not come she was truly angry with her wilful daughter.

But the girl had never seemed so happy. She was like a bird—some song bird with her bubbling spirits and gaiety. And when, after a week's absence, Duncan did appear, she greeted even him with a smile of alluring sweetness.

"You think I'm going away," he said. "You're right. You're going to leave."

When the Creeps Came

(Copyright, 1904, by C. D. Lewis)

I had purchased for half its value what had been known for ten years as a haunted house, and on the day the deed was delivered to me I made arrangements to pass the night in the place, and I was there at an early evening hour.

To begin with, the parlor was the length and width of the house without a partition, as was also the case with the cellar. On the first floor was a parlor, sitting room, dining room and a kitchen with a pantry off, and not having been tenanted for years the whole building was very much out of repair.

After going through the whole house from top to bottom I took a seat in the kitchen and lighted the lamp I had brought with me, though I had candles besides. I began reading a novel I had selected, and thus put in the time until 11 o'clock, but even as I read I had a nervous, uneasy feeling. This so grew upon me that I finally laid aside the book and passed out of the back door. I remained until I had smoked a cigar, and then feeling more quiet I re-entered the kitchen.

As I opened the door I found the room in darkness. I had left a bright light on the table, and there was not draught enough to flare a candle. I stood for a moment undecided, having no feeling but of surprise, and of a sudden I heard soft footsteps retreating into the sitting room. It was the echo of slippers or of one walking on a carpet, and I traced their progress for a distance of twenty feet.

When I could no longer hear them I struck a match and relighted the lamp, noting that the chimney was still a little warm and that the wick had been turned down. Although my heart was beating like a hammer and my hand was trembling, I took up the lamp and went through every room in the house, finding nothing, of course.

After returning to the kitchen I lighted two of the candles and placed them in the lower rooms and then forced myself to sit down.

I was trying to argue things out when a noise like the humming of a telegraph wire came from the hall and was speedily followed by a wail and a sobbing. It was like a child crying out in distress, and I lasted fully thirty seconds.

As I rose up I shook so that I feared to drop the lamp, and my throat was so dry that I could not have made a loud sound, but I passed through the rooms into the hall and upstairs again. So upset was I that in descending the stairs I had to sit down three different times, and my feet dragged after me as I walked through the lower hall.

However, after dragging myself back to the kitchen and taking a seat I began chiding myself a fool and a coward and to try to whistle, and I determined to pay no more attention to the mysterious noises.

Ten minutes went by, and I was trying to smile at my own fears, when a pat, pat, pat, of footsteps caught my ear. They began in a room over my head and descended the stairs and came along the hall and through the sitting room. I sat looking into the open door of this room, which was lighted by a candle, but, though I heard the footsteps, I saw nothing.

They crossed the room, they entered the kitchen, they advanced to the table, and as my hair stood up and my heart choked me the lamp was blown out, and I was left in semi-darkness.

If I tell you that I yelled out and jumped for the door and fled across the fields, you will not call me cowardly.

It was 8 o'clock next morning when I returned to the house. The candles I had left burning had not burned out, but had been blown out. I told my story to a number of people, and a hard-boiled man, who claimed never to have known what fear was, volunteered to pass a night in the house, claiming that all the noises I had heard were made by the wind or rats. He had changed his mind several hours before daylight came, however.

At 2 o'clock he awoke me, and in all my life I never saw a man more broken up. He had heard the wailing and sobbing and gone over the house with his lighted lamp. Soon after midnight, as he sat by the kitchen table, he had caught the sounds of footsteps on the cellar stairs. He plainly heard the footsteps take every stair in rotation until the top, only a few feet to his left, was reached, and then the lightly closed door swung softly open. He was looking full at it when it did so. There was a minute of deepest silence, and then the lamp at his elbow was suddenly turned out.

For a few seconds the man could not move a finger, and though he had seen no one he fully expected to be struck or stabbed. Then he made a rush for the outer door, banged it to behind him and ran for his life.

After breakfast I went over to the house with him. There was the lamp—there the open cellar door—there the overturned chair. What hand had opened the door and turned down the light? What voice had cried out in that wailing, sobbing way? Had the living or the dead walked about through halls and rooms?

I wanted nothing more to do with the house, and at once gave orders to have it razed to the foundations. Was the mystery solved in the tearing down? No. The workmen found nothing whatever which could in the remotest degree account for the noises, and the affair is just as much of a mystery to-day as it was then. Neither of us was a coward nor given to superstition, and yet the noises, caused any way you please, had driven us from the house, something like a fit of terror.

SERVANTS IN RUSSIA.

The Law Excludes Them as Witnesses Against Their Employers.

The Russian servant is hired for out year and is told exactly what his particular duty is to be. He then sticks to that duty. As long as each servant faithfully performs the special duties of his position all is well, but the neglectful butler or cook or chamberlain is sent by the employer with a written note to the police judge, who after carefully investigating the complaints has a right to order bodily punishment or to write a bad mark in the book kept for this purpose.

In great Russian households often from twenty to fifty servants are kept, and even the middle class families have two to four. The pay of these servants varies according to the line of work. While the "chefs" in the kitchens of wealthy families often receive 1500 a year, a cook in an ordinary citizen's employ gets no more than 12 a year, and a maid of all work never gets more than 10 a year. At Easter every servant gets a present, generally a suit of dress.

Every other Sunday the servants in a Russian household are entirely free. Their work stops Saturday night after supper, when the servants leave the house not to return until the next Monday morning. If employers never ask where or how the free time is spent.

Russian servants will pilfer. Since Russian ladies leave everything to the care of the servants the latter do as they please.

The maidservants smoke cigars belonging to their masters and pay frequent visits to the wine cellars of the house, but a gentleman would consider it "demeaning" himself to prosecute a servant for this.

The Russian servants will talk about fellow servants, but never about their employers. Even when they quit one place and take service in another family they would never mention anything about their former masters.

This discretion goes so far that even the law considers it. In Russia the law excludes servants as witnesses against their former or present employers so long as, at least, as these servants are not suspected of having taken part in the crime.—London Mail.

SHORT TALKS.

A terrible lot of love is wasted on cats, dogs and unmarried men.

So many people waste time! Do you do it? Do you talk, and talk about nothing?

How we all dislike the child that has its own way and is impudent! All of us need a great deal of training.

A good many people are like picnics—their good qualities are not known because no one handles them right.

When a woman's daughter marries a preacher she is more firmly convinced than ever that her children have advantages she did not enjoy.

If a woman truly loves her husband, when she is asked how he is she will say, "Well, he does not complain, but I do not think he is very well."

If you have a little hard sense it has probably been beaten into you; very few have it naturally. So that, after all, adversity and criticism are useful.—Atchison Globe.

The Bear He Missed.

Telling in his book of some hunting experiences near the north pole, Captain Everdrip wrote: "Walrus and seals were harpooned and shot and also the large arctic hare, which seems to have contracted the peculiar habit of frequently running long distances on its hind legs. Hunting was not always easy, the atmosphere playing strange tricks with the eyesight, as witness the following account of the stalking of a bear: 'With the utmost caution, with his gun ready and his eye fixed inexorably on the bear, Seibel advanced to the spot. Meanwhile the bear sat wagging its head, but keeping a good lookout. It appeared, for when Seibel had come some twenty steps nearer it rose and flew away. It flew as well as any bird, which, after all, was not remarkable for it was a glaucous gull.'"

An Important Difference.

Not long after a series of losses at sea on a certain steamship line two travelers were discussing transatlantic liners. One of the men preferred the C—line, the other the T—line, the one on which the repeated wrecks had occurred.

"There's one important difference," said the first, "that you don't seem to have considered, but which weighs strongly with me."

"What is that?"

"Why, the C—line guarantees to take you across, but the T—line guarantees to take you only as far as it goes."—Harper's Weekly.

He Found It.

"Always," said the astute news editor to the new reporter, "always be on the lookout for any little touch of humor that may brighten up our columns."

That evening the new reporter handed in an account of a burglary in a butcher's shop which commenced, "Mr. Jeremiah Cleaver, the well known butcher, has been losing flesh rapidly of late."

Editorial Diversion.

"I expected to find that suit done," returned the customer.

"Oh, well, here's the other suit done," said the tailor, who was a low wick, and who had a bill in his hand.—Buffalo Express.

When a man hears that a girl is getting $6 a week, and that she can make a pretty dress out of good old-fashioned cents, and pays no board, he wonders what she does with all her money.

A Bow of Corn Colored Ribbon

A girl with an umbrella in her hand and a reticule on her arm was vainly endeavoring to tie her shoe on a crowded sidewalk.

"Will you permit me?"

A young man spoke the words in a well modulated voice and with a deferential tone. Then, without waiting for a reply, he dropped on one knee on the sidewalk, regardless of the mud and the crease in his trousers, and endeavored to tie the shoestring. Alas, it was broken in the middle.

If an untied shoestring in the street is a misfortune, a broken shoestring is a tragedy. The girl, seeing the state of the case, would have been appalled but for that reliance on the sterner sex natural to women. She waited for him to get over the difficulty without in the least concerning herself about it.

The gallant fellow looked at the broken string, thought rapidly, then plunged his hands into each of his dozen pockets. From one of them he drew a corn colored ribbon that had bound to gether packages of cigars; then, getting rid of the broken shoestring, he laced the shoe with the ribbon.

"There," he said, rising and standing with lifted hat; "that will serve till you reach home."

The girl gave him a smile and a "Thank you," and went on her way.

Grafton Hatch watched her retreating figure till it had passed out of sight. He was not conscious of the impression she had made on him; it simply occurred to him that he would like to meet her again, and when it had occurred to him once it occurred to him again and again. Indeed he kept on thinking so till at last it became a mania with him.

Months passed before he was rewarded by another sight of the charming girl. It was springtime, and he was riding in an open electric car. A car coming from the opposite direction passed him, and he had such a vision as one may gain from a flash of lightning on a dark night. It was the girl whose shoe he had laced, and in a buttonhole of her corsage was the bow of corn colored ribbon he had used for a shoestring.

The fire smoldering in Grafton Hatch's bosom at seeing this evidence of the impression he had made burst into a flame. But the pleasure he took in the discovery was marred by the thought that living as he did in a great city the chances were that he might never meet the girl again, or, if he did, possibly under circumstances prohibitory to his having a word with her. The distressing complication well nigh threw him into a fever. He signalled the conductor to stop the car, with a view to looking the girl over just passed, but on looking back saw that it was already far in the distance and realized the impossibility of catching it.

Hatch spent a great deal of time trying to conjure up a method of communicating with the girl who wore his colors, but could think of none except a personal advertisement, and from this he shrank. Nevertheless, after a long period of distress he tried it, but whether his ad. never met the girl's eyes or she did not care to reply, he did not hear from her.

During the following summer Hatch visited the seashore. There were a number of resorts scattered along the coast, and the place where Hatch was stopping was separated from the one adjoining it on the north by an inlet. It was not very broad nor very deep, but there was no bridge across it and unless a boat was handy there was no way to cross it except by swimming. One afternoon Hatch went with a party of friends to the inlet for crabs. The lines were baited and the crabs were hungry. One of the ladies of the party, a girl who doted on Hatch, got a crab within reach of her landing net—she was trying to land Hatch as well—but was unable to get the crab into it. She called on Hatch, who was also in the act of landing a crab, to help her. Hatch was about to relinquish his prize to hasten to her assistance when, suddenly darting a glance at a party on the opposite bank of the inlet who were gathering up their nets and crab lines preparatory to departing, he saw a sight that changed the whole current of his intentions—the girl whose shoe he had laced. And still she wore his colors.

Hatch took in the situation as a general who perceives that without a desperate sortie his enemy will escape him. The girl struggling with the crab heard a splash and, looking on the disturbed waters, saw Hatch swimming in a straight line for the opposite bank. She watched him till she saw him clutch the bank, draw himself up and dripping, hat in hand, stand before a girl with a bow of corn colored ribbon in her buttonhole.

Then she gave up hope. The crab meanwhile had got away.

That was the last seen of Hatch by any of his party that season. He walked away with the girl with the bow of ribbon and did not return to his hotel till late at night. He was soaking wet, but the weather was hot, and he was soon quite dry; besides, what were limp and rumpled garments to a man who had found his love.

The incident had been witnessed by 40 many persons that it was a committed on the part of the lover, and the girl's friends were not slow in connecting him with the bow of ribbon she had long worn and of which she had persistently refused to give any explanation. A provisional engagement was announced before the lovers separated, which, after Hatch had presented his credentials was made permanent. During the following autumn both crabbing parties were invited to the wedding.

Jokey Jack Tar.

"Jokey" is the word generally associated with the Jack tar. He is the picture of health, and the health built over in mirth and merriment. When people are sick, especially when sickness attacks the lungs, the doctor often advises a sea voyage. But in the large majority of cases the sea voyage is impossible.

It is to the men and women of the workaday world to whom sea voyages or change of climate are impossible, that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery comes as the greatest earthly boon.

The effect of this medicine upon those whose lungs are "weak" is remarkable. Even where there is bronchitis, spitting of blood, emaciation, weakness, conditions which if unchecked would lead to consumption, "Golden Medical Discovery" in ninety-eight cases out of a hundred works a perfect and permanent cure. It strengthens the stomach and nerves, and the organs of digestion and nutrition, so that the body in all its parts is not merely fed but nourished. And it is by nourishment that Nature builds up the body to resist or throw off disease.

I had a terrible cough something over a year ago and could find nothing to stop it or even to do me a particle of good," writes J. M. Farr, Esq., of Cameron, Screven Co., Ga. "I changed to see an advertisement of yours, and forthwith bought a bottle of your invaluable 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Before I had taken half a bottle I was entirely well."

PEPSIN SYRUP CO.,
Monticello, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I am more than pleased to recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for any one suffering from organic disorders. Late hours, irregular meals at different hotels, excessive work and continual loss of sleep so upset my digestive organs that it was next to impossible to sing my role.

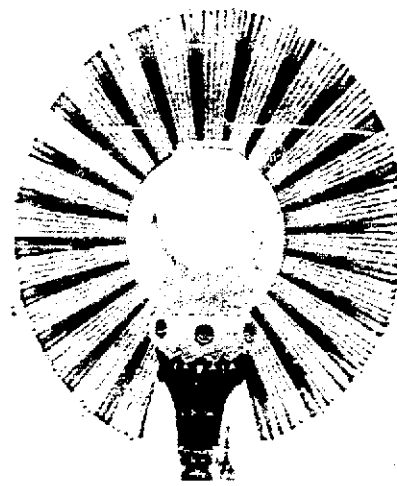

To appear to the best advantage in my work, a healthy physique is absolutely essential. At the suggestion of a friend I tried several bottles of your Syrup Pepsin. I never felt better than at present.

It is now one of my fixed rules to carry a bottle of your medicine in my traveling case. For the benefit it has done me I feel under lasting obligations.

Very sincerely yours,

WILLIAM G. ROGERS.

BANQUETED

By Teachers of the Garfield Building.

Members of the Board of Education Guests of Honor at a Pretty Affair.

The teachers of the Garfield school building paid a noteworthy compliment to the members of the board of education today, by serving a dinner in their honor in the rotunda of the building. The affair was one of just such a charming nature as the excellent teachers of the ward school might be expected to devise, and was thoroughly enjoyed. In addition to the members of the board, Supt. and Mrs. Miller were present as invited guests.

Whatever may be the differences existing between certain factions and the board of education, that is soon to retire, there has been nothing, but the most pleasant relations with the teachers, who have been encouraged in their work, and the event today is a testimonial of the kind feeling which exists.

Remarks were made by several present in return for the courtesy, and President Prophet deserves especial notice for his happy address.

WAYS OF A SWINDLER.

Youngstown, Vindicator.—A swell looking fellow from Chicago registered at a hotel in Wooster, using the title "Dr." before his name. He picked out a number of gentlemen about the town whom he engaged in conversation about running horses and races incidentally telling them that he owned a running horse which had won him a big roll of money. A telegram from Chicago about this time advised the doctor that his horse was a sure thing, and then he got busy. He said he would send a thousand to place on the horse and if any whom he had told about the horse wanted to take a chance he would place the money for them, promising to refund all money given him if the horse did not win. A pretty good lot of money was placed in his hands to send to Chicago to bet on his horse. The doctor left town. Nothing has since been heard of him or the horse. The only thing heard of a running race was heard the night of the election when Wayne county broke away from the Democrats and went to the Republicans.

THE PREACHER'S ERROR.

In the early days of Springfield a preacher bought some sausage for lunch one Sunday and took it to church with him. He carried the sausage in the back pocket of his coat and a dog, catching the scent, followed him. Every few feet the preacher would kick backward at the dog without looking around. Arriving at church the preacher began the services and the dog lay down behind the altar.

A few minutes later one of the deacons stole quietly up behind the preacher, intending to hand him a sheet of paper, and pulled his coat tail. Without glancing back, the preacher gave one vicious kick and sent the deacon rolling down the altar step, onto the dog, which set up a terrible howling. The preacher, still looking straight ahead, said: "My friends, this thieving scoundrel has been trying to rob me ever since I made a purchase at the butcher shop before coming here."

When the preacher discovered what he had done he dismissed the congregation and went outside to kick the dog.—Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat.

THANKSGIVING IN KENTUCKY

Atlanta Constitution.—There is nothing like stopping, at least once a year, and taking stock on one's blessings, so to speak. It is surprising how many things are on the right side of the ledger in the humblest man's life. We like the spirit of Mayor J. H. Powell, of Henderson, Ky., who has issued the following official Thanksgiving proclamation since the presidential election.

"By authority vested in me as mayor of an unpretentious little city, I do this publicly proclaim:

"Whereas, In accord with Christian custom, Thursday, November 24, 1904, hath been set apart as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, I do beseech saints and sinners to go to church on the good. Whether chanting hymns, singing psalms, or sipping delicious poison from the eye of beauty, keep innocency and take heed unto the thing that is right, for that shall bring a man peace at the last."

"Let us be thankful that our cornfields are not so full of corn as our corn is full of kernels.

"Though the surrounding soil, riddled with a hoe, is laughing with harvest, poor folks are still with us. From this soup and cold potatoes, good Lord deliver them. O? Christian men and women, astonish the stomach of the starving sufferer with oysters, turkey and mince pie. Adorn the ragged pauper with comfortable clothing. Announce of practice is worth a pound of preaching.

"Dear beloved, let us play upon a harp of a thousand strings, a new song of praise, give thanks unto the Lord for the most charming crop of beautiful babies ever born in the old town since creation dawned and the morning stars sang together. Sweet, dainty darlings, smile on, like sunbeams in shady places. Kick up your little heels and make of earth a heaven.

"With charity unto all and malice toward none, I do herewith subscribe my official signature to the words that have been written this 9th day of November, 1904."

What town in all the broad land cannot join with Henderson, Ky., in devout thanksgiving for the babies whose birthdays are still numbered by months, and where do not the "sweet, dainty darlings" make of earth a heaven, that is the right spirit. Who would be a race suicide since President Roosevelt was almost unanimously elected on a stork platform?

The nation will join with the mayor of Henderson, Ky., on the baby thankfulness proposition and on the kernel count. The season has been a fruitful one in both respects and we are all, north, south, east and west, in a mood to play upon a harp of a thousand strings.

No Poison in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

From Napier New Zealand, Herald: Two years ago the Pharmacy Board of New South Wales, Australia, had an analysis made of all the cough medicines that were sold in that market. Out of the entire list they found only one that they declared was entirely free from all poisons. This exception was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, made by the Chamberlain Medicine Company, Des Moines, Iowa, U. S. A. The absence of all narcotics makes this remedy the safest and best that can be had, and it is with a feeling of security that any mother can give it to her little ones. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is especially recommended by its makers for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

COSTUMES FOR GIRLS.

Plaid is again popular for school frocks, and is most becoming and serviceable. It is used in combination with plain cloth or velvet. A bretonne or suspender dress made of green and blue plaid has a glimpse of hunter's green ladies' cloth, trimmed with small gilt buttons.

Inexpensive frocks for dancing school or party wear are made of silk mull, and trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion. They are generally cut with a low round neck called the St. Cecilia neck.

A pretty coat for a girl of twelve is made of nut brown velvet trimmed with brown silk braid and a hint of burnt orange velvet. With this is worn a brown beaver hat having a shirred brown ribbon rushing around the crown. Several tips shading from burnt orange to brown droop gracefully over the brim.

For little tots of from two to four years, nothing could be prettier than the white beaver Continental hats, simply trimmed with rosettes of white satin ribbon edged with a double frill of chiffon.

A modish shirt waist for a young girl is made of royal blue Lotus cloth with wide attached plaits. The center bon plait is covered with Russian cross-stitch embroidery done in red and blue.

Lotus cloth is a heavy highly mercerized cotton fabric; it may be obtained in a large variety of designs and beautiful shades, which are guaranteed absolutely fast colors. The material is 28 inches wide, a most desirable width for cutting children's garments, wrappers, house dresses and shirt waists. Unlike other mercerized wash fabrics, which lose their lustre, Lotus cloth becomes more brilliant by laundering, and can easily be washed at home as it does not require starch. The cost per yard is moderate enough to suit the most limited purse.

A pretty little rain coat for a wee girl is made of dark red cravenette stitched with black. It is double breasted and has a fancy cape.

A string of gold, turquoise or amethyst beads fitting tightly around the neck makes a birthday present that is highly appreciated by little maids.

The new Pompadour ribbons are effectively used for trimming felt or beaver hats and are also employed in making puffs, ruchings and rosettes for dressy frocks.

Babies' dresses are very elaborate this season, those for show occasions being masses of hemstitching, French knots, hand embroidery and lace, put on with fancy stitches. But for ordinary wear, soft nainsook or Persian lawn dresses, made simply, are the most desirable. Coats are of bengaline, silk poplin, China silk, or Bedford cord, and are trimmed with a little lace, chiffon applique or ribbon.

After several seasons of neglect white aprons are again being worn by little maids at school, and at home. —Pectorial Review.

YOU WILL NOT REGRET

Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs and colds; reliable, tried and tested, and sure. A general household favorite wherever used. H. F. Vortkamp and Mm. Melville.

There is a certain unfortunate and melancholy gentleman of whom you have all heard; his name is Dennis. A man just defeated for office would welcome Mr. Dennis as a cheerful companion.

There is this much in the latest fat suggestion: You can blacken any one's character by simply suggesting something bad about him. The claim that one can cure corns by suggestion is ridiculous.

Occasionally a man refers to the "Burlington rowl," and another man looks at him pityingly, as though he should have said "root." Those of you who use "rowl" should not be ashamed of it.

You cannot cure piles by external application. Any remedy to be effective must be applied inside, right at the seat of the trouble. Manzan is put up in a collapsible tube, with a nozzle, so that it reaches inside and applies the remedy where it is most needed. Manzan strengthens the blood vessels and nerves so that piles are impossible. Manzan relieves the pain almost instantly, heals, soothes, cools and cures. H. F. Vortkamp.

CARDUI BABIES

Many homes are mere lonely abodes because no children are there. Barrenness exists in almost every case because female diseases have paralyzed the organs of womanhood. Cardui makes it possible in thousands of cases where barrenness is supposed to be incurable. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow and also prevents miscarriage and cures bearing down pains. Wine of Cardui removes the cause of barrenness by making the female organism strong and healthy.

Go to your druggist and secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui. The use of Wine of Cardui will bring happiness to your home.

In cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tennessee.

At Denver, Colo., Feb. 24, 1902.
Wine of Cardui is worth its weight in gold. It does more than you claim. It has saved my life and caused me to become a mother when everything else failed.
MRS. DORA I. E. LE FEVRE.

BRYANT, Va., Feb. 18, 1902.
My daughter-in-law, Lizzie Giles, found great benefit in Wine of Cardui. She had a miscarriage in March 1901, before using your medicine. She was in very bad health, so I persuaded her to try Wine of Cardui. Since then she has had a fine baby boy. Soon he will be three weeks old. She highly recommends Wine of Cardui.

My daughter, Fannie Hudson, also has a fine baby boy by your treatment. She highly appreciates Wine of Cardui.
MRS. LOUISA GILES.

A POLICEMAN'S TESTIMONY.

J. N. Patterson, night policeman of Nashua, Ia., writes, "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least half dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world."
H. F. Vortkamp and Wm. Melville.

THANKSGIVING EXCURSION.

On November 23rd and 24th, the Erie R. R. will sell excursion tickets at very low rates. Tickets good returning until Nov. 28th. O. L. Enos, T. P. A. d&w-tt

MONEY-RAISING SALE*Overstocked! Overstocked!

The reasons for this great money-raising sale are logical and reasonable---we bought too heavily. This has been a backward season. The weather has been unfavorable and consequently we are overstocked; but regardless of these facts the bills we owe are due, and we must have money to pay them, and our only object is to secure enough money to pay them. This sale presents an extraordinary money-saving opportunity. Right in the midst of the season when most men or boys are yet without their fall or winter suits or overcoats, we herewith offer you the most sensational bargains you've ever bought. We except no previous event when we repeat that the following offering is the greatest ever known. The entire stock of Men's, Boys' and Children's Suits, Overcoats, Pants, in fact every article in the store without reserve as to color, quality or weight, go on sale and have been cut even below their former low prices. There is not a resident in Lima or Allen county or the surrounding country that can afford to stay away from this great sale. We mention below a partial list of big bargains, but there are hundreds of others. We promise you a great saving of money in patronizing the MONEY-RAISING SALE, and assure you that it is a strictly bonafide sale.
